Roosevelt Tells Why U.S. Can't Use Soviet Bases

President Declares Such Action Would Plunge Russians Into 2-Front War

Reply to Criticism

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, firing a broadside of answers at the five United States Senators who recently toured the battlefronts, said yesterday that Americans were in no position to ask Russia to go to war with Japan.

He said he didn't think we knew enough about the situation to ask the Russians to fight a two-front war. Maybe, he said, the Russians aren't prepared to risk a Japanese invasion of Siberia; maybe they feel that they have something better to do by fighting Germany.

The Russians, he continued, may feel that they have knocked the Germans down three or four times, and that if they hit them again they will take the count.

President Roosevelt referred with a chuckle to the globe-girdling Senators—Mead (Democrat) of New York, Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky, Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, Brewster (Republican) of Maine and Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts—as fellow travelers.

Lodge's Remark Recalled

Lodge reported on his return that he had been informed by high naval and military officers that if Russia would let us use her Siberian bases to attack Japan, a million American casualties would be saved. Some of the others were sharply critical of America's failure to keep pace with Britain in the political field.

Mr. Roosevelt said that when public servants say things that are not thought out carefully, they sometimes create bitterness. Some bitterness, he said, had been reflected in the British newspapers, although on of them, the London Daily Telegraph, thought the whole thing was childish and ought to be aired.

The President said he had spent a lot of time digging up statistics to answer criticism by the Senators.

A Good Thing

He said he was of two minds in connection with this criticism: In one sense it was a damn nuisance; in another it made for public discussion, and in a democracy that was a good thing.

The President had talked about Portugal and the war, and, his biweekly news conference was about to break up when he called reporters back. He wanted to give them the statistics he had dug up to answer what the Senators had said about oil, trucks, and other matters.

After he had done this, he was asked to comment on Senator Lodge's statement about the use of Russian bases. He responded eagerly.

Russians Would Resist

Now, suppose, he said, that we were to use the Russian bases. What would be the first thing we would do? Naturally, he answered, we would send in troops and labor and a lot of airplanes. And, he continued, what do you think Japan would do? Try and stop it—yes. The Japanese would start invading Siberia.

The Russians would, of course, resist. But suppose, the President went on, Russia wasn't prepared to

U.S. Chamber Backs Retail Sales Levy

Urges Paring of Federal Spending; Anti-Inflationary, Economist Asserts

The United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday asked Congress to enact a Federal retail sales tax over Administration opposition and to pare Government spending five billion dollars as a substitute for increased individual and corporate tax rates.

Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the chamber's Federal finance committee, and Fred R. Fairchild, Yale professor of political economy, recommended the sales tax as "the most effective anti-inflationary tax that can be levied at this time" and the only remaining source of untapped new revenue.

Maximum Already Hit

A resurgence of committee interest in a sales tax was indicated as the chamber sent four witnesses to the Capitol to testify against Administration proposals to raise ten and one-half billion dollars in new revenue, chiefly from corporate and individual income. The chamber witnesses said corporate and individual income tax burdens already have hit "maximum."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, declined a specific commitment but told witnesses a sales tax will be voted on in the committee "and probably in the House."

During one interchange in the committee, Doughton said: "I've never been able to reconcile the Treasury's argument that increased income taxes would retard inflation, while a sales tax would increase inflation."

Fairchild's Views

Fairchild told the committee:

"With income taxes, profit taxes and estate taxes already pushed to their limit, if not beyond, and with the withholding tax now serving to give probably the maximum possible broadening of the income-tax base, there remains, I think, only one type of taxation that is required to round out a broad inclusive national tax system."

Said Alvord: "Contrary to the expressed position of the Treasury, it is our belief that a sales tax meeting the condition we have above outlined (1) is capable of reasonably simple and effective administration, (2) is desirably deflationary, (3) will collect substantial revenues without imposing unbearable burdens, from those receiving four-fifths of the national income . . ."

Minimum Exemptions

Neither of the witnesses suggested a specific rate, suggesting that a rate be selected to fit the amount of income desired. A 10 per cent rate, they said, would yield six billion dollars, and 5 per cent, half that sum. They suggested minimum exemptions or none at all, a uniform rate, with the tax imposed on the purchaser

U. S. Also to Use Azores Bases Ceded to British by Portugal; Yanks Turning Volturno Flank

5th Army Smashes Forward 14 Miles In Day; British Record Advances

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 12.—The impending battle of the Volturno River was further delayed today by floods that swept over the stream's steep banks at some points and hopelessly mired heavy equipment of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army, but Allied air forces ranged the Mediterranean skies unimpeded to soften the enemy for the blows that will come with dry going.

An Allied communique said only patrol activities and artillery duels had enlivened the rain-bogged front across Italy in the last 24 hours. The Nazis grasped the respite to strengthen their defenses in depth along the northern bank.

Despite the weather, the British Eighth Army was reported to have gained ground at some points on the Adriatic end of the line. German resistance in this area was described as increasingly stiff, however, and west of Termoli British patrols ran into enemy tanks.

Turning Flank

(Radio France of Algiers said in a broadcast heard in London tonight by the British Ministry of Information that American forces had advanced more than 14 miles in the last 24 hours and penetrated deep into mountainous terrain on the Italian front. It added that the Allied Fifth Army is beginning to turn the flank of the Volturno front north of Benevento.)

(A British radio broadcast recorded by CBS said some German troops attempted to cross the Volturno in rubber boats early today, but "the boats were all sunk and the enemy force wiped out." The broadcast did not indicate the strength of the enemy detachment involved.

Corfu Hit Hard

(A Berlin broadcast said German forces along the Calore River at the center of the Italian line had retreated to new positions in the mountains near Cerreto, 8 miles west of Pontelandolfo, whose capture the Allies announced yesterday.)

In the day's most telling aerial assault, American Mitchell medium bombers escorted by Lightning fighters rained bombs on a Nazi air field on Corfu, strategic Greek island dominating the entrance to the Adriatic. In addition to raking the Garitza Airfield, the Mitchells scored two direct hits on a mer-

Gains Along Dnieper Widened By Russians in Hot Fighting

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Oct. 13.—Soviet forces widened their areas of penetration on the west bank of the Dnieper in close-quarter fighting yesterday after battering down German counterattacks, and the Berlin radio said without elaboration that the Red army had opened a new drive "north of Kiev."

The Russian operational communique and midnight supplement, broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor, disclosed today that Red army troops had edged closer to the White Russian citadel of Vitebsk in the north in the face of stern enemy opposition.

In all these active areas the Russians destroyed 53 Nazi planes by air combat or antiaircraft fire, destroyed or disabled 42 German tanks, captured 2 artillery batteries and silenced 8 others it was said.

Fierce local fighting was reported in the battles of the Dnieper, through which the Red army is closing in relentlessly on the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

The communique said that one formation killed 700 of the enemy; that in another area the Russians won a height and killed about 1500 Germans in hand-to-hand engagements. In still another sector, the Germans accomplished a breakthrough with 11 tanks, but Red artillerymen disabled or destroyed the tanks in a half hour.

Approximately a battalion of German infantry was reported

London, Oct. 12.—In an agreement announced by Prime Minister Churchill in Commons, Portugal today granted Britain naval and air antisubmarine bases in the Azores, strategic Atlantic crossroads commanding all routes from the United States to Europe and the Mediterranean.

The new bases, made available to Britain immediately, will give the Allies valuable aid in the battle against the German submarine menace, expected to rise sharply again as the Allies prepare to invade the continent. The Azores lie 1643 air miles southwest of London, 1037 miles west of Lisbon and 1495 miles southeast of the big At-

Labor Problem Is Ironed Out At Brewster

Kaiser and Union Chief Hail Worker, Management Plan

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 12.—Shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser, elected president of Brewster Aircraft Corp. last Thursday, announced today most of the corporation's labor problem already had been ironed out.

Sitting beside Kaiser when the announcement was made at a press conference was President Tom de Lorenzo of Local 365, CIO United Automobile Workers.

De Lorenzo agreed with Kaiser's statements, and said his union was "approaching the policy of unqualified support of Mr. Kaiser without any of the reservations we had with the previous management."

The House Naval Affairs Committee will open an investigation at Washington tomorrow into the corporation's failure to increase plane production for the Navy.

De Lorenzo's Statement

Kaiser said happy labor relations at the company's plants in Newark, N. J., Johnsville, Pa., and Long Island City, N. Y., had been effected through a new policy of labor-management cooperation, and the company would concentrate on production of Corsair planes for the Navy.

"The positive type of action we have been getting from the new management of the Brewster Co.," said De Lorenzo, "will probably result in its heading the list of all other aircraft producers in the country today."

De Lorenzo said he did not believe previous proposals of Brewster employes to go on strike, three times tabled by the local's executive board, would be raised again.

Kaiser remarked that "never in my experience were there so many problems to be faced and so many to be corrected in so short a time" as he found at Brewster.

"In all my talks with Tom de Lorenzo," Kaiser said, "neither of us has ever mentioned strikes."

30-Day Delay Seen

By Robert C. Albright

House overhauling of the Senate-passed fathers' draft bill to delay induction of parents until all undeferred able-bodied nonfathers can be called up on a national basis last night was predicted by ranking members of the House Military Committee.

Following day-long hearings with Selective Service and War Department officials, Chairman Andrew J. May said he thought drafting of fathers can be held up 30 days if the national pool of eligible nonfathers is first siphoned dry.

Friday Rewriting Day

Committeemen were considering a thoroughgoing revision of the Senate measure, including revival the old Kilday bill provisions making dependency a prime factor in deferments and prohibiting induction of men on purely occupational grounds.

May said the committee will meet Friday to rewrite the Senate measure, after taking time out today and tomorrow for House action on increased payments to service dependents.

The House service benefits measure, lifting payments to wives of enlisted men with one child from $62 to $75 (with $20 added for a second child and $15 for each additional), faced a sheaf of liberalizing amendments.

Indications were House allowances will at least match the Senate's more generous provisions ($80 for a wife with one child, with $20 more for each additional child), when the dependency legislation finally clears the House tomorrow.

Texas Flier Bags 5 Himself, Damages One, Gets 'Probable'

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Wednesday), Oct. 13.—The latest addition to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aerial armory, the P-47 Thunderbolt fighter, took the spotlight over the weekend when four of them tackled 32 Japanese fighters over Wewak, New Guinea, downing eight and possibly ten.

This stirring action of eight-to-one odds was the feature of today's communique, which also reported new Allied air blows in the Solomons, a stir of Japanese air activity, and the killing of more than 400 Japanese by Australians in mopping up operations to the north west of captured Finschhafen, New Guinea.

In belated reports on the fighting above Finschhafen, headquarters said the Japanese were slain in a series of counterattacks. Meanwhile, Australians in the Ramu Valley who are moving north within approximately 40 miles of the enemy coastal base of Madang are expanding their holdings by driving Japanese from outpost positions in high ground.

One Man Gets Five Japs

A delayed dispatch from New Guinea reported that Col. N. E. Kearby, 32, of Dallas, Tex., qualified as an ace fighter pilot in the P-47 action by the quickest means possible—shooting down five Japanese fighters in a single engagement.

That in itself would have been enough to put Kearby in the ace class. But, with three already to his credit since the Thunderbolts began operations in this area just a short time ago, he now has a total of eight to lead the P-47 outfit. To the best recollection of Brig. Gen. Paul B. Wurthsmith, boss of the Fifth Air Force Fighter Command, five Japs downed in one day is a record for the Southwest Pacific.

Kearby accounted for probable and damaged Japs in addition

Aboard a U.S. Carrier Flagship Retiring From Wake, Oct. 9 (Delayed).—The blistering American air and naval assault against Wake Island Tuesday and Wednesday was revealed today to have inflicted such devastation among the island's defenses the Japs either will have to evacuate or completely rebuild their facilities.

Rear Admiral Alfred E. Montgomery, leader of the mighty task force, released reconnaissance reports showing that the majority of Wake's installations were thoroughly smashed.

The largest armada of aircraft carriers ever assembled, including some brand-new flat tops augmented by powerful cruiser and destroyer forces, hurled at least 750 tons of shells into the island's defenses during the 48-hour attack, he revealed.

Carrier-based warplanes meanwhile rained 320 tons of explosives on their objectives in 830 sorties, while heavy land-based bombers poured countless additional tons of destruction on the island in night

Baltimore Man Warned Away From Defense Districts

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 12.—Donald Shea, 57, who said he founded the National Gentile League and the American Prisoners of War Association-Friends' and Relatives' League, reported today he had been ordered by military authorities to stay out of four coastal defense commands.

The Eastern Defense Command headquarters in New York confirmed that Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum had issued the order excluding Shea, a resident of Baltimore, from the EDC, the Western Defense Command, the Southern Defense Command and the Sault Ste. Marie area of the Central Defense Command.

The court insists, however, that he consider the situation for a month beefore making a decision.

Mocarsky, 23 and the father of a 4-month-old child, pleaded guilty here yesterday to refusing to report for induction. Judge Carroll C. Hincks suspended sentence "on condition the defendant shall accomplish his removal from the United States and thereafter shall remain outside its borders."

Almost immediately, Mocarsky's attorney told the court his client did not want to accept the proposal, but preferred to be sentenced at once. The judge, however, advised Mocarsky to think it over.

Judge Hincks did not say what sentence he had in mind for Mocarsky, but he told reporters today that "I see no reason why we should feed him for three or four years."

855 U. S. Planes Dropped 1250 Bomb Tons on Bremen

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that American Flying Fortresses dropped 1250 tons of bombs on Bremen and nearby Vegesack Friday—making the raid one of the biggest, if not the biggest, daylight raid of this war over Europe.

A total of 855 planes was sent out on the raid including Fortresses and escorting P-47 Thunderbolt fighters, the President revealed.

The disclosures were made by the Chief Executive at his regular press conference. He said he had some statistics which he felt the American people ought to know.

Figures provided by the President follow:

The planes flew at least 850,000 miles in the air total mileage.

Considering taxiing, landing and taking-off distance, the planes rolled more than 1400 miles on the ground.

Almost one million gallons of gasoline were burned.

About 25,000 gallons of oil were consumed.

More than 5000 American crew

OWI Survey of Gas Situation Paints a Pessimistic Picture

By Edwin D. Gritz

A comprehensive public report on the gasoline situation along the home front was issued by the Office of War Information yesterday, sparing neither civilians nor Government officials in telling why the gasoline picture was bad and is going to continue to be bad.

Finally issued after weeks of behind-the-scenes controversy with the agencies involved, the nine-page report bluntly stated that not only will there probably be less automobile gasoline available, but its quality will become progressively poorer.

The report also disclosed for the first time that last year's Eastern fuel oil and gasoline crisis was caused by the sinking of 14 large tankers bound for immediate military use in North Africa. Replacements had to be found and shipped out quickly, thus making it imperative to draw on every resource in the East.

The report indirectly took Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown

HOW BIG IS YOUR HEART?

YOUR GIFT TO THE COMMUNITY WAR FUND IS THE ANSWER

Washington has many "war orphans," "orphans" whose parents have gone into war work or are working longer hours at their regular jobs, and thus have too little time to spend with their children.

These youngsters must get sympathetic help and guidance somewhere; they must have supervised activities to keep them busy; they must have decent places to go; they must be kept off street corners and from roving gangs.

Duce Decrees Death Penalty For Italians Ignoring Orders

By the Associated Press

At the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Oct. 12.—Benito Mussolini's Fascist Republican Government, getting in step with the stern measures of the Nazi occupation forces, ordered the death penalty tonight for Italian civilians who fail to heed German and Fascist decrees.

The order was part of a program to quell patriot activities in northern Italy.

A Milan dispatch to the Bern newspaper Der Bund disclosed a series of orders inflicting the death penalty on anyone assisting prisoners of war to escape; operating a radio transmitter; failing to respond to the call of the compulsory labor law; persuading others not to respond to the labor call, or plundering houses wrecked during an air raid.

Life imprisonment was set up for anyone spreading reports unfavorable to the Axis armies or that might cause a popular uprising; distributing pamphlets without governmental permission, organizing private or public political meetings without government leave.

Numerous summary executions were reported throughout northern Italy on the least pretext, advices reaching here said.

The difficulties of the Fascists and Germans in persuading the Italians to present themselves for forced labor was again indicated today in a Rome dispatch to the Tribune de Geneve. The dispatch said the Germans are now promising the Italians they will be used near their homes.

Sabotage Brings New Repressive Moves in France

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—The rising tide of sabotage in France has driven the Germans and their Vichy collaborators to the sternest repressive measures, including new attacks on Jews and a decree giving mobile guards the permission to shoot on sight.

The situation the Vichy government is struggling to control was bluntly described by Jacques Barteaud over the Paris radio and recorded in London by Reuters. Barteaud said the "harvests are burning, railway lines are being blown sky high and trains are derailed."

"Everywhere French National Socialists are falling under tommy-gun bullets while the army of terrorists is moving about freely almost under the protection of the robes of judges who are only too ready to acquit criminals," he added.

many should attempt to spread the war to the Siberian Peninsula.)

Churchill told Commons that the new facilities "will enable better protection to be provided for merchant shipping in the Atlantic," and "will prove an important factor in shortening the war."

Although the agreement was announced amid rumors that Portugal, Britain's oldest ally, was about to take an active role in the war, Churchill made it clear that the Portuguese government—in full agreement with Britain—desired to "continue their policy of neutrality on the European mainland and thus to maintain a zone of peace in the Iberian peninsula."

Premier Antonio de Salazar of Portugal emphasized the same point in a press conference at Lisbon, saying nothing in the agreement affected Portuguese determination to maintain neutrality on the European mainland.

It was considered likely here that the Germans would refrain from hostility toward tiny Portugal, which has an army of only 150,000 and a negligible air force, in order to keep up their valuable diplomatic and spy activities in Lisbon.

Hope was raised immediately in London today that Eire, Turkey and other neutrals might take Portugal's action as a precedent and extend military facilities to the Allies. Turkey is allied with Britain under much the same sort of a treaty as the 570-year-old British-Portuguese agreement under which today's action was taken.

The new agreement has been under negotiation for several weeks, and a Bern dispatch early today, hours before the agreement was announced, said Allied vessels already were patrolling off the Azores.

It will be homecoming for any American ships which put into the Azores bases now opened to the British, for the islands housed the United States Navy's Atlantic Fleet headquarters during the last war. Bases in the islands are not granted to the United States under today's agreement, however. The United States has no such treaty as that between Portugal and Britain. In 1914-18 Portugal promptly declared war on the Central Powers and her soldiers fought on the Western Front.

The German news agency DNB said in a Berlin broadcast that the British-Portuguese agreement had some points not announced here, including a provision for the abolition of German consulates and other Axis consulates from the Azores, and for the deportation of Axis nationals.

British occupation of naval and air bases on the Azores will complete a great cricle of island outposts guarding the Allies' all-vital Atlantic sealanes and will close the last gap in the oceanwide air patrol which once already has driven the U-boat packs back into port.

The southern extension of the anti-U-boat barrier thus will help fulfill the first essential condition for victory and the invasion of Europe specified by Churchill after the Casablanca conferences—defeat of the submarine.

With their big international seaplane base, naval harbors and military barracks all probably ready for immediate use, the nine Azores islands will:

1. Give the Allies land bases for anti-U-boat sea and air patrols.

2. Enable the Allies to provide a 24-hour air patrol over all routes from the United States to Europe and the Mediterranean and a reinforced patrol over the Bay of Biscay main hunting ground of submarine packs.

3. Provide a refueling base on the southern shipping route to Britain and the Mediterranean, which hitherto has been little used because of its extreme danger.

4. Possibly enable fighter planes, and certainly bombers, to be flown directly from North America to Africa and later to the continent with a refueling stop at the Azores.

3. Provide a more suitable winter Air Ferry route to Britain.

Portuguese-owned for five centuries, the Azores are an island group of volcanic origin with a few secure harbors, particularly at Angra Do Heroismo, Ponta Delgada and Horta. The islands have a population of 242,000.

Jap air armadas attacked the naval flotilla—which represented more striking power than was needed to win the battle of Midway—in two desperate counter-raids. But at least 30 of the Jap bombers and fighters were sent flaming from the skies, and Navy warplanes smashed another 31 enemy planes on the ground for a grand total of 61 Jap planes destroyed. Only 13 Navy planes were downed in the furious dogfights and seven members of the crews were saved.

Fighter pilots roaring over the island at 50-foot altitude said the Japs were packed into trenches and foxholes, apparently expecting an invasion assault. But despite the fact the enemy's defenses were so mutilated that a few hundred Marines could have taken possession of the island, no attempt was made to land. Montgomery's force was comprised solely of combat ships and tankers for refueling, and contained no amphibious vessels.

The devastating air and sea assault was declared to have achieved its objective—destruction of the enemy's defenses to such an extent the Japs either will have to abandon the island or expend valuable shipping, men and materials in rebuilding its installations from the ground up.

Fifty-two-year-old Montgomery, a resident of Seattle, Wash., and former director of flight training at Corpus Christi, Tex., flashed a message to the ships in his force as they retired from Wake: "Well done."

Reviewing the 48-hour assault on the 10-acre coral island, Montgomery revealed that among the vital installations completely destroyed were three power plants, more than half the water supply system and two distillation plants. The latter are extremely necessary to the Jap defenders, as no fresh water is available.

Berlin Sees Balkan Landing Plans Abandoned

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 12.—The Berlin radio, despite continued Allied aerial attacks in the eastern Mediterranean and the operations of Yugoslav guerillas, said tonight that the Allies now had abandoned a plan to land in the Balkans this year.

Berlin conceded that at the time of the Italian armistice on September 8 the Dalmatian coast ports were in the hands of troops loyal to Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio or anti-Axis Partisans. The broadcast described that period as the "most favorable momen" offered British and American forces for a land operation in the Balkans and added that an operation "seems to have been definitely abandoned in view of the approaching winter."

Direct contradiction of the German claim that Nazi forces had weathered the worst of the storm in Yugoslavia was contained today in a communique of the Yugoslav liberation army which announced that Partisan forces "firmly held" the Dalmatian coast south of Split. This would place these forces in control of approximately half their country's coast line.

Fighting Is Bitter

Bitter fighting continues, said the communique broadcast by the free Yugoslav radio, in the sectors of Susak, Otocac, Duga-Resa, Karlovac, Zara and Sinj, all north of Split.

Capture of Slankamen, on the Danube near Novisad, and Zumerak, last Ustashi strongpoint west of Zagreb, also was announced. Slankamen is approximately 50 miles northwest of Belgrade.

In an attempt to quell the opposition of liberation forces the Germans have threatened to destroy every city, town and village in Yugoslavia and to shoot an unspecified number of hostages, the war bulletin added. German planes scattered leaflets containing the threat over Yugoslav cities.

Not Living Soul Remains

It said this threat had been carried out on the town of Novomeste, which is 40 miles west of Zagreb, adding "not a living soul remains" there.

A German attempt to storm the important Partisan stronghold of Tuzla, 100 miles southwest of Belgrade, was beaten off by columns of the First Bosnian Corps, operating under the Liberation Army banner of Drug Tito, the communique related.

Yugoslavs in London said they had learned that one and probably two Italian divisions still were fighting alongside the Germans in Istria and Slovenia, while at least two full Italian divisions are cooperating with the Liberation Army.

The German radio claimed that the Partisans lost more than 5000 killed and 7300 taken prisoner in fighting during the last few days on the Italian Istrian Peninsula.

Doctor Suggests Auto Mishap May Have Killed WAC

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Oct. 12 (AP).—A coroner's jury late today announced as its verdict that WAC Second Lieut. Naomi Kathleen Cheney, 25, of Jasper, Ala., "met death feloniously at the hands of a persons or persons unknown."

Her body, the skull battered, was found a week ago in a ravine at the western edge of the city. Lieutenant Cheney was stationed at an Army air base here.

Investigation thus far has proceeded in the theory she was slain, but one inquest witness, Dr. M. Gerundo of Vermillion, assistant professor of pathology at the University of South Dakota, said he believed that fatal injury might have been the result of her being struck by an automobile.

A man whose name has not been revealed by police still is held for investigation in the officer's death.

Dr. Gerundo quoted medical authorities to show, he said, that a skull fracture such as Lieutenant Cheney received frequently resulted when the head is run over by the wheel of a motor car. He asserted there was no evidence of rape, either actual or attempted.

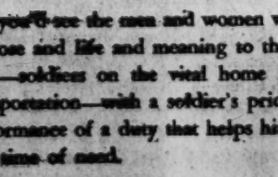
WITH Cap Transit

SPINNING WHEELS:

Washington's biggest industry on wheels is the Capital Transit Company. If its nine Carhouses, six Garages and Yards were gathered in one place, they would cover an area of many city blocks!



If you looked inside these buildings you'd be amazed at the bee-hive of activity, the extensiveness and variety of equipment, the many different skills and trades behind the running of our big fleet of Street Cars and Buses. You'd see stockpiles of reserve parts to keep 'em rolling for the duration—28,000 different items—all systematically arranged for instant finding. You'd see millions of dollars worth of equipment essential to the efficient moving of a big City day after day.

And you'd see the men and women who give purpose and life and meaning to the equipment—soldiers on the vital home front of transportation—with a soldier's pride in the performance of a duty that helps his Nation in a time of need.

130,000 Tons of Jap Ships Lost a Month

U. S. Subs Chiefly Responsible, Roosevelt Says; New Grumman Widely Praised

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said yesterday, that an average of 130,000 tons of Japanese shipping had been sunk every month for the last six months, principally by American submarines.

Mr. Roosevelt said, that if the rate of Japanese sinkings kept up, it would total about 1,400,000 tons a year. He remarked to a press conference, that he had observed previously that the tonnage of Japanese vessels being sent to the bottom was larger than enemy replacements.

In addition, the Navy announced yesterday that an impressive 21-to-2 boxscore has been run up by its new Gruman Hellcat fighters in their first fights with Japanese Zeros.

Superior in All Respects

Airmen of the squadron which first took the Hellcat into action against the Zero report the new American fighter "superior in all respects" to the Nipponese plane, the Navy Department stated.

"Pilots expect continued good hunting with this airplane," declared the report from the Solomons air force.

In the Hellcats' first clash in the Solomons, 10 of the American planes took on 15 Zeros and ran up a tally of 8 Nips shot down without a single Yankee plane or pilot lost.

Two of our planes were badly shot up and the pilots were wounded, but the rugged Hellcats were able to get back to base.

On a second mission, 11 Hellcats got into a scrap wwith 18 Zeros and knocked off six of them. One of our planes is missing.

Japs Outmaneuvered

One of the planes, piloted by Ensign Paul C. Durup of Wollaston, Mass., got one of the enemy planes on his tail. He went into a steep dive from 500 feet and just barely managed to pull out at 50 feet over the water. The Nip, following him down, plunged straight into the sea.

The Hellcat, designed after Pearl Harbor specifically to meet the Zero, is said by the Navy to be "bigger, faster, more maneuverable and a better climber" than the Grumman Wildcat, its predecessor, which outfought the Zero despite being outclassed by the latter in some qualities.

Judge Assails Coeducation as Delinquency Cause

Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 12 (AP).—Discontinuance of coeducation from the third grade through high school is District Judge W. Scott's recommendation as a step toward lowering juvenile delinquency.

Boys and girls can be better prepared for their place in society by training under teachers of their own sex, the judge declared after sentencing three girls, aged 15 and 17, to the State training school for girls.

"In most cases involving girls they assume the attitude that just because they are girls they can act as they are doing and get away with it and that the boys will be the 'goats,'" he said. "From now on, the girls will feel the brunt of the law just the same as the boys.

"I realize that the war has something to do with the present situation. The parents work and not a few of them spend their evenings in taverns and permit the children to run the streets at all hours of the night.

"All these youngsters think of today is sex and they seem to have no respect whatsoever."

Nazi Navy Losses End Threat, Says Admiral James

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Admiral Sir William James said tonight that the damaging of the Nazi battleship Tirpitz by midget British submarines marked "a definite defeat for German's surface threat to Allied sea supremacy.

Recapitulating results of Allied vigilance against any developments of a German surface threat, capped by the crippling of the Tirpitz by midget submarines, which penetrated Alten Fjord in Norway, Sir William said:

"The Admiral Graf Spee and Bismarck have been sunk. The Gneisenau probably is out of action for good. The Scharnhorst, Luetzow, Admiral Scheer, Prinz Eugen and the Admiral Hipper have all been damaged more or less severely."

Portugal Getting British Material

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—Marcelino Garcia, senior partner of the Garcia Steamship Lines, said today upon his return from a 3-month European trip that large quantities of war materials were being received daily in Portugal from Great Britain.

Receipt of the material is general knowledge both in Portugal and Spain, he said, with no attempts being made at concealment.

War Sidelights

Nazis Reported Urging Pope to Flee Vatican

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Unconfirmed reports from neutral Stockholm and Switzerland tonight said the Germans were attempting to persuade Pope Pius XII to leave the Vatican and take up residence in northern Italy.

Catholic opinion in London, however, was that the Pope would refuse to leave the Vatican voluntarily, no matter how close the battle raged.

King's Doctor Freed

Stockholm, Oct. 12 (AP).—The Germans, at the personal request of King Christian X, have released his personal physician, Prof. Eric Warburg, arrested in a roundup of Danish Jews, the Free Danish Press Service said today.

King Christian said he needed the services of Warburg, who is credited with saving the monarch's life during a summer illness.

Got German Rocket

A United States Bomber Base in England, Oct. 12 (AP).—The first United States flier to handle the deadly Nazi aerial rocket—and live to tell about it—is Staff Sergt. George T. Rankin, 29, of Fountain City, Tenn.

Manning his right waist gun on a Flying Fortress during the height of the Muenster raid Sunday, he heard something come in the window and hit the floor behind him.

One look was enough.

"For a fraction of a second I thought of taking it back to England for analysis," he said, "but that was about all the time it took me to pick it up and throw it out of the window."

Lucky he did. A few seconds later Rankin saw it explode far below the plane.

He said the rocket looked like an ordinary dry cell battery with a black stovepipe on one end, about 15 inches long.

The sergeant's squadron commander has commended him for saving his ship and its 10-man crew.

Italian Fleet to Be Used—Churchill

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill said today, that the position of the Italian fleet and crews is "still under active consideration" and that, in any case, the United Nations would make the best possible use of them.

He told Commons that more than 100 warships and more than 150,000 tons of merchant ships were in Allied hands. The warships include five of Italy's six battleships in commission, and 8 of 11 cruisers.

Mediterranean U-Boat War Stepping Up

By the Associated Press

Secretary Knox, reporting that the Germans are increasing their submarine strength in the Mediterranean, said yesterday that the U-boat menace has not been licked and will be serious to the end of the war.

Just back from a 25,000-mile tour of European battlefronts, the Navy Secretary told a news conference, however, that it is a "rational assumption" that the British will be able to transfer part of their Mediterranean fleet to operations against the Japanese despite the increased U-boat activity.

Among other of Knox's observations were:

1. A "competent defense organization" has been established all the way from Recife, Brazil, north along the Atlantic Coast.

2. Brazilian forces are making an increasingly substantial contribution to the anti-submarine war. Brazil has a growing fleet of ships for use against U-boats and Brazilian airports are becoming increasingly important in the fight. "The Brazilian picture," he added, "is one of marked and gratifying progress."

3. Damage to Naples was so frightful that the city presented a "scene of utter destruction and despair." The Germans sank more than 70 ships in the harbor in an effort to make it useless to the Allies. Knox witnessed part of the battle for Naples from a P-T boat.

4. British and American forces in England get along well, and have a high spirit of cooperation.

Knox's press conference was held before the British announcement that Portugal had granted the Allies antisubmarine bases in the Azores.

Italy Will Choose Own Government, Berle Declares

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 12.—Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., reiterated tonight President Roosevelt's assurance that Italy will be restored as a respected member of the family of nations under a government of its own choosing.

The relations between the United States and such an Italian government, Berle said in an address before the Italian-American Labor Council, will be governed by the good-neighbor policy of friendly cooperation between equals.

The Assistant Secretary commended Marshal Pietro Badoglio for recognizing the "relentless logic" of the situation created by Italy's unconditional surrender when he "called on all Italians to make common front against the Nazi tyranny."

Roosevelt Tells Why U. S. Can't Use Red Bases

fight a two-front war; suppose she had all she could do to fight the Germans.

Mr. Roosevelt thought it all boiled down to a question of whether Russia was able to resist Japan as well as Germany.

Are we, he asked, in a position to say that Russia ought to go to war with Japan? He answered by saying he didn't think we knew enough about it.

In his categorical answers, the President first referred to the charge that America had to use a disproportionate amount of her oil, while Britain was conserving hers. If, he said, we had adopted a policy of using raw materials on the basis of the size of a country's resources, a lot less oil would have reached the battlefronts.

The Senators, he said, seemed to be more concerned about ownership than need. A war can't be won that way, Mr. Roosevelt continued; it must be run on the basis of using the oil at the closest place you can get it.

Here Mr. Roosevelt referred to a charge by Senator Brewster that the United States had sent 30,000 civilian trucks to Australia in a year while alloting only 15,000 trucks to American businessmen. Mr. Roosevelt said he checked up on this and found that this figure was wrong—that in two and a half years we had sent 21,135 trucks to Australia, which needed them badly.

Incidentally, he said, in that same period, 750,000 trucks were turned over for civilian use in the United States. The President said the Senators failed to note that the trucks had been ordered for Australia with the approval of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The President was asked if he had noted the conflict in the senatorial statements about the British wearing American uniforms in North Africa. One version, he was told, had it that the British did this so they wouldn't be shot by the French; the other that the long American trousers protected British legs against mosquito bites.

The President thought that ought to make a good senatorial debate. But since it concerned trousers, he observed, it ought to be behind closed doors.

In the Senate yesterday Senator Mead, strong Administration supporter and one of the five "fellow-travelers," took the floor to defend the President's overall conduct of the war and clarify the question of Russians bases.

Heated discussion arose over the question of the reported disclosure by Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts that three military leaders had told him one million American casualties might be prevented by the use of Russian bases.

Mead said he wanted to get it in the record that he had made no such statement, nor had he heard it made by any commander in the Pacific area.

Arising to defend Lodge, who was absent, Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan asked if the veracity of the Massachusetts Senator was being questioned. Mead said he was not questioning Lodge, but putting his own facts in the record. Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, declared "it was strange indeed" that the leaders in the Pacific theater would give such information to one Senator, and not to any of the others, not even to the chairman of the group, Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia.

London Paper Protests

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—The London Daily Mail declared editorially today that the five United States Senators who have reported their findings on a world tour of battle fronts to a Senate executive session were likely to hamper war production unintentionally by "creating civilian indignation and prejudice."

The editorial was the first extended answer by the British press to recent criticism in some Senate quarters of British postwar economic aims.

The Daily Mail recalled that one of the most common wartime slogans was "Careless Talk Costs Lives," and added:

"We commend this slogan to the five American Senators who appear to be busy throwing large-sized spanners (wrenches) into the delicate machinery of Anglo-American understanding."

In Italy, Allied fighter-bombers smashed at Nazi gun positions the length of the front and destroyed motor transport and trains that are straining to keep the enemy's fighting forces supplied with food and ammunition.

Fighters patrolled the skies throughout the day, looking for trouble, but the Germans did not send up a single plane to meet them. Not a craft was lost to the Allies in all the day's operations.

For the seventh straight day, the air war was carried to the Nazis in the Aegean Sea and in the islands off Greece. United States heavy Liberators poured bombs on the Calato Airfield in Rhodes and Heraklcion Airport in Crete, while bomb-carrying Lightnings attacked the Antimachia Airport on the Island of Cos in the Dodecanese.

German motor truck convoys north of Rome were attacked Sunday night, an announcement said, and bombers also raided Frosinone, Cassino and Mondragone, northwest of Naples. Fighter-bombers scored direct hits on a long train and the railway station at Pescara, 52 miles above Termoli on the Adriatic coast. Another train transporting motor trucks was shot up and the locomotive destroyed.

Moscow reported also that several populated places fell to the Russians in a continuing offensive against Vitebsk, where they were last reported about a score of miles away from their objective.

The Russian troops are already reported in the suburbs of Gomel and with some units already across the Sozh River.

Air Fights Over Dnieper

Aerial battles over the Dnieper were described as almost incessant, with the Russians now enjoying the initiative on nearly all sectors and with the Nazi air force undergoing a crisis. The Soviet army newspaper Red Star said the Germans now were on a general aerial defensive.

Mrs. Sophie Hood Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Sophie Ely Hood, 80, widow of Edwin Milton Hood, former chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Washington, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Hines Chapel, 14th and Harvard sts. nw. Burial will be private. Mrs. Hood died Monday at her home, 1226 Fairmont st. nw

Born in New York, February 2, 1863, Mrs. Hood had lived in Washington for more than 70 years. Her husband who was connected with the Associated Press for half a century, was dean of Washington correspondents at the time of his death in 1923.

Mrs. Hood is survived by a daughter, Miss Gretchen Hood of Washington.

Senate Group to Continue Slum Tour

John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, will meet at 10 a. m. today with members of a Senate District housing subcommittee to continue a tour, begun last Saturday, of Washington's slums and NCHA reclaimed properties.

The party will leave from the office of Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee. Other members who are expected to join in the trip are Senators Capper (Republican) of Kansas, Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland and McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada.

Meanwhile Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee declared that either he or Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland would introduce legislation to provide funds for slum reclamation. The Maryland Congressman is chairman of a subcommittee which investigated housing conditions here last spring.

Olsen & Johnson
give you their "Pick of the Post" on the newsstands today

1 FLYING SWEET AND LOW
By MacKinlay Kantor

OLSEN: "I think here's a story that ought to start a rash of mutinies aboard Nazi subs. MacKinlay Kantor went Nazi-hunting on one of those jumbo hunters of the RAF Coastal Command. And what a ship! A giant Sunderland Flying Boat. Kantor kept his eyes open, watched and learned how those big babies bag their U-Boats. Got acquainted with the poker-face crew, too. Those boys know their job so well they can duck a Junkers-88, polish off a U-Boat and coast into the home harbor without even spilling their tea. Thumbs up, lads! Cheerio . . . and all that sort of thing. I sure was pleased to meet you."

2 THE OLD GORDON PLACE
By James Street

JOHNSON: "This story packs a kick like one of those Mississippi mules it tells about. There's a funny, lovable kid in it named Ronny . . . a wacky old Granny who can't read but likes to kid folks and make-believe she can . . . and acres of cotton land that Ronny's soldier brother tells him to plant goobers on. It's the kid that supplies the kick, when he decides Granny's gone daffy and he's got to be the man of that backwoods family. I don't think I'm going to forget that kid for a long, long time. Maybe you want to howl at the kid—but you don't. You just smile . . . and feel kind of proud of him."

3 LEAVE US GRAB SOME SLEEP
By Douglass Welch

OLSEN: "What about that screwball, 'Happy' Digby, Johnson?"

JOHNSON: "You mean that hot-shot photographer of the Central City Daily Informer—the guy who said the world's only trouble was that nobody got enough sleep?"

OLSEN: "Yeah, there's a story that rolled me in the aisles. Digby's neatest trick, for my money, was when he made that stuffed shirt rival turn in a phony alarm, all about Nazi paratroopers landing in Central City."

JOHNSON: "And it was only 'God Bless America'. These days folks need laughs and here they are—big size!"

"Chic" Johnson and "Ole" Olsen stars of "Sons-O'-Fun"

THEY LAUGH for a living . . . and live for laughing, these two big-time comics. "Hellzapoppin" every minute for these two "Sons-o'-Fun," on stage and off. Invited to an after-theatre party, the boys arrived in a hearse because Olsen was dead tired. And that's a fair example of the length they'll go for a laugh.

Early in their professional partnership "Ole" and "Chic" learned to avoid petty jealousies, which accounts for their twenty-eight years together.

Olsen devotes much of his free time to his New York restaurant which he started for the sole purpose of getting the kind of food he likes best. Johnson operates a 1000-acre dairy farm and he's up at eight every morning out feeding the stock. And with days as crowded as theirs, the boys still find time for reading.

SAYS "OLE" . . . "Nothing is more important in the life of a comedian than keeping posted on affairs of national and international importance. The Saturday Evening Post keeps me informed—and its short stories are great."

Medical Data To Be Secured On Selectees

Selective Service headquarters yesterday directed local draft boards to gather detailed medical and social histories of registrants classified for induction into the armed forces in a new move to improve its methods of selecting men.

Medical field agents attached to each of the country's 6500 local boards are being appointed to assist in the job.

The information gathered will not be used by the local boards in classifying registrants, but will be made available to examining doctors for the armed services at induction stations.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, stated in a bulletin to draft boards:

"The Selective Service System and the armed forces want to make certain that the greatest possible care is taken (1) to accept those registrants whose previous medical and social history indicates their ability to adjust themselves under situations of stress, including those who may be termed 'borderline' cases, and (2) to reject those registrants whose condition is such as positively indicates physical or mental breakdown, or failure to adjust themselves to the responsibilities of military service after being inducted."

Procedure also was established for the review of the records of men rejected at induction centers or discharged from the armed forces for neuropsychiatric reasons.

If a local board "is of the opinion that such rejection or discharge was erroneous," Hershey stated, "or the causes for such rejection have ceased to exist, it may refer the registrant to the (Selective Service) medical advisory board."

Medical advisory boards are attached to all draft boards.

During recent Senate consideration of the fathers' draft, the handling of rejections for physical and mental reasons was criticized on the floor, with some legislators expressing the belief that present standards are either too high or too loosely applied.

Hershey estimated that approximately 100,000 men will be discharged from the armed forces during this year for "nervous and mental reasons."

A study of 2500 veterans of this war discharged before August 1, 1942, showed that approximately 40 per cent were discharged because they were suffering from mental and emotional disorders which incapacitated them from military duty, Hershey said.

About 6.2 per cent of that number became so ill that they had to be hospitalized, Hershey said.

Under the new program, which Hershey termed a medical survey, registrants will be required to fill out two forms—one containing an identity verification and one detailing the registrant's education.

The two forms will be forwarded to State Selective Service directors, who will check the information against State files of persons with mental diseases and with school authorities.

Other forms will be filled out by the Selective Service system for use by induction center medical examiners and by Selective Service medical advisory boards.

Deceit, Indecision Charged to OPA

By the Associated Press

Representative Harness (Republican) of Indiana yesterday accused the Office of Price Administration of either "deliberate deceit or not knowing from one day to the next what it is doing."

Harness declared he had been informed September 27 by OPA's director of gasoline rationing that no cut was planed soon in the value of coupons. He said he so informed several of his constituents, but on October 1 the agency announced a decrease in the value of B and C coupons.

Gallinger Report To Be Released Today by Senators

Senator Harlan J. Bushfield (Republican) of North Dakota, said yesterday that the report on Gallinger Hospital prepared by himself and Senator Douglass Buck (Republican) of Delaware, would be ready for release by 9 a. m. today, according to present plans.

The Senators and other members of the Senate subcommittee which investigated affairs at Gallinger were scheduled to have met last night to discuss the recommendations contained in the report.

In the meantime, Senator Bushfield said, he had started a personal inquiry into the death of Miss Adie Mae Carroll, 42, nurse at Gallinger, who died of diabetes at Casualty Hospital 10 days after her discharge from a Gallinger ward as cured.

Dr. Church Dead; Offered Million Hitler Reward

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP).—Death came unexpectedly last night to Dr. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, who offered a one-million-dollar reward in 1940 for the capture of Adolf Hitler "alive and unhurt" because he believed the German dictator intended to violate the neutrality of Holland and Belgium and overrun western Europe. He was 85.

The internationally known writer, lecturer, and educator died in a hospital after an operation for an embolism. He was stricken at his desk, while dictating a letter to Dr. Carlos Martins, Brazilian Ambassador, concerning next Thursday's 46th annual observance of the institute's Founder's Day.

Gen. Collins Gets Legion of Merit For Pacific Action

Maj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins of 5936 31st pl. nw., has been awarded the Legion of Merit for "exceptionally meritorious conduct" in the fighting on New Georgia, the War Department announced yesterday.

COLLINS

General Collins was credited with "outstanding services in leading his division against the Japanese in the campaign between August 3 and September 5, and his citation reads in part:

"With excellent military skill and foresight he initiated an aggressive pursuit of the enemy forces disposed to the north of Munda airfield. Overcoming seemingly insurmountable logistical and communication obstacles, he vigorously pressed forward over extremely rugged jungle terrain, made junction with friendly forces moving down from the north and, with the combined force, succeeded in driving the remaining enemy from the island."

General Collins previously won the Distinguished Service Medal for his achievements as chief of staff of the Hawaiian Department.

Mrs. Gladys E. Collins, the general's wife, lives at the 31st pl. address. His son, Jerry Collins, is a West Point cadet, and he has two daughters Gladys and Nancy Collins. His family has not seen him since he left for overseas shortly after our entry into the war.

Red Cross to Get $107

A check for $107 from the Government girls living in West Potomac Park will be presented to the District Chapter of the Red Cross today. The money, which will be used to buy packages for prisoners of war, was raised at a fair given by the girls on September 18 at their recreation center.

Labor Problems at Brewster Already Eased, Kaiser Says

Long Island City. The trip was most productive in that we both agreed that it was absolutely essential that we both, almost as one family, give our utmost to the Navy in its efforts to produce the greatest number of planes. I am convinced that the absolute cooperation between the Navy management and ourselves, acting as one unit, can and will get excellent results. Discussions between Mr. Kaiser and myself threw new light upon the situation, which makes it clearly evident that my paramount duty under the present war conditions is to support the Navy and the Kaiser management, and do everything within my power to be useful. I am certain that every one of the Brewster employes and myself will take this position.

"While the Government has the responsibility of prosecuting the war to a successful and speedy conclusion, we have a responsibilitiy of a new management under Mr. Kaiser's inspiring direction to do everything possible to produce the very maximum in order to aid in that prosecution. I feel this to be my responsibility as a citizen and I know that the Brewster employes feel the same way and will join with and Mr. Kaiser in a concerted attempt to go all out to support the war effort and the Navy."

Kaiser responded with this statement:

"I am personally delighted with the progress in achieving cooperation yesterday in the trip with Tom de Lorenzo and my further talks with, him convince me that he, like myself, considers the winning of this war and the postwar inseparable and indivisible. They are one and the same thing. He likewise is concerned with the postwar and the condition under which labor will work in that period, and he is anxious that labor's condition be improved."

[The investigation here will open at 10:30 this morning in the Naval Affairs Committee room, with Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, ranking majority member, as chairman of the subcommittee authorized to investigate the plant after its "chaotic conditions" were described in an article by Agnes E. Meyer in The Washington Post, October 3. The first witness is expected to be Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal.]

legislation as well as service benefits, meanwhile, ran into sobering opposition.

At a closed hearing of the committee, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson opposed Selective Service law provisions proposed in the Senate-passed fathers' draft bill, and strongly reiterated his stand for occupation as the chief grounds for deferment. Patterson again called for enactment of a national service law.

Earlier, in open session, the committe talked over the Senate bill combing industry and Government of all but "indispensable" nonfathers with Lieut. Col. Francis V. Keesling, jr., Selective Service liaison officer.

Representative Paul J. Kilday (Democrat) of Texas criticized the Senate bill provisions on indispensability. He said they would violate civil service rules on security of tenure by forcing Federal departments to "fire" physically fit nonfathers of military age who held no certificate of indispensability. In industry, he charged the same provision would abrogate union contracts and give employers a means of getting rid of union leaders, since local boards would have no option but to induct men for whom employers asked no certificate. Kilday demanded that appeals machinery be written into the bill if Senate draft procedure is followed.

Colonel Keesling recommended an amendment permitting appeal from a local draft board action on an employer's application for a certificate of indispensability.

The House group is expected to retain a number of the Senate provisos, including the requirement that a national commission of doctors be set up to review Army and Navy physical standards.

and on aggregate purchases. Such a program they said would make the Treasury's proposed excise tax increases unnecessary and would effectively aid in stamping out black markets.

Alvord bitterly attacked the Administration's tax proposals as "supported solely by political expediency." He argued that the so-called inflationary gap "is incapable of mathematical computation;" that if the Treasury's computations are accepted, its tax program is woefully inadequate;" but that the Treasury prgoram "does not profess to reach the groups (salaries under $5000) said to possess the 'dangerous dollars'."

Alvord indorsed the George plan for building up corporate and individual savings for financing postwar requirements by permitting corporations and individuals to purchase nonnegotiable and noninterest bearing bonds, which would become negotiable and interest-bearing after the war.

Fairchild told the committee the Government's projected 1944 spending of 104 billion dollars could be pared by five billion "without impairing any essential service—indeed possibly to the improvement of the public service."

Representative Starnes (Democrat) of Alabama, meanwhile, told the House that a demand has been made by the House Appropriations Committee upon the Army and Navy to submit revised budgets on the basis of changed military conditions, with a view to reducing war costs. Starnes said budgets were prepared far in advance of the fiscal years to which they apply. He said many of the military and naval projects appropriated for were necessarily tentative.

Vegetable Yields Drop In Some Crops

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday reported below expectation yields of green lima beans, kraut cabbage, sweet corn and tomatoes available for canning and freezing this year.

Kraut cabbage prospects declined 18 per cent during September and now promise to be below the average set by 10 prewar years. The other crops, however, are above the 10-year average even if below 1942 record yields. Tomato prospects declined 3 per cent during September, but still were up 53 per cent over the average production from 1932-1941.

Still up above the 1942 yields were the prospects for canning beets, which improved during September in all important States except New Jersey.

The OPA ruled yesterday that the Government would pay 2½ per cent less than civilians on processor sales of canned fish, and an additional 1½ per cent less if payment was made within 10 days of purchase. This difference is possible when the Government buys direct, OPA said.

In another food-front development, Russian thanks for vegetable and field seeds sent to help in restoration of normal life to regions recaptured from the Germans were expressed to Americans in a note released by the Department of Agriculture.

In the name of collective farming peasants of the Soviet Republic, Commissar Benediktov expressed gratitude to the "organizations and individuals who participated in the purchase, assembling and forwarding" of the seeds and said they helped many destitute families reestablish themselves in areas "ruthlessly devastated and scorched" by the enemy.

The official statement was made to former Ambassador William H. Standley and cleared through the State Department.

Book 4 Green Stamps Good November 1

Green stamps from War Ration Book Four will be good for the purchase of rationed canned fruits and vegetables beginning Novemoer 1, the OPA announced yesterday.

"A," "B," and "C" stamps becoming valid at that time will retain their value through December 20.

Ickes Restores Coal Mines to Operators, Acting Under Connally-Smith Law

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday terminated more than five months of Government operation of the country's coal mines, putting the pits back in the hands of their owners with the wage dispute which precipitated Government seizure on May 1 still unsettled.

Ickes acted under provisions of the Connally-Smith Act, which requires the return of property seized because of labor disputes to be returned to their owners within 60 days after the predispute productivity is restored.

The coal mines are now producing approximately 12 million tons of soft coal a week, compared to a preseizure peak of 12½ million tons.

1700 Mines Returned

Ickes actually turned back 1700 mines to their owners yesterday. Previously he had dribbled back 1600 other mines over a period of weeks, starting on August 20.

Completely ignored was an October 31 deadline set by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, last June 20 when he ordered a third general coal strike this year ended.

Strike Threat Passes

Then Lewis indicated that the miners would resume their walk out if Government ownership was terminated, but this strike threat has dissipated in recent weeks as Ickes returned the mines piecemeal.

Meanwhile, the War Labor Board is going ahead with consideration of the miners' wage dispute with anthracite coal operators and a signed agreement with Illinois soft coal operators settling the "portal to portal" issue. Action by WLB is expected before the October 31 deadline—probably within 10 days.

He expressed appreciation to his deputy, Carl E. Newton, president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, whom he "borrowed" to run the mines. Newton and his personal staff are resigning, he said..

No comment was available from Lewis or other UMW officials.

Lewis hopes that WLB will approve the Illinois agreement which provides $1.75 additional daily, part compensation for more work and part in payment for hitherto uncompensated "travel time" underground.

Never Used Power

By relinquishing the mines, Ickes also surrendered his authority to order the mines onto a 48-hour week to increase coal production. This power was granted to Ickes by the War Labor Board, but never exercised.

The Illinois agreement provides for a basic 8½-hour day, including travel time, instead of the present 7-hour day excluding travel time. The additional worktime that would be provided under this agreement varies from 30 minutes to 70 minutes, depending on the travel time of the individual mine.

No estimates were available as to the costs of Government operation, but one official predicted that the question probably would be litigated by coal operators in the Court of Claims for many years to come.

Apprenticeship Bill Presented

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire yesterday introduced a bill to provide for a joint apprenticeship - educational program for District youths.

Under its provisions, administrative functions would be granted a director of apprenticeship, to be named by the Secretary of Labor, and to serve without pay.

The bill would permit apprenticeship agreements between employers and 16-year-old youths, who would sign contracts to serve 4000 hours under a graduated scale of wages and concurrent education.

Julia says—
It's a shame to waste food
I OFTEN wonder how many of us realize the vast quantities of good food we normally throw away each day. Yes, it's literally so; most of us waste enough in a month to feed our families for days!
War-time conditions make it more necessary than ever, of course, that each of us cut food waste to an absolute minimum. We all know that, in a practical sense, it's impossible to avoid having some leftovers. But they can be used, tastefully! Meats, macaroni products, gelatine and desserts stand up well as leftovers, and many times they can be dressed up in casseroles, soups and similar dishes, with fresh vegetables added to give new nutritional strength.
On the whole subject of wasted food, here's a check list that has a practical value:
Here's a Quiz for YOU, on Kitchen Economy
Do you cook meats carefully, to avoid shrinkage and to avoid burning the fat? Yes☐ No☐
Do you strain the fat from your meat cooking, and use it whenever you can in place of shorting? Yes☐ No☐
Do you regularly take used fats to your meat man, so they can be turned into ammunitions? Yes☐ No☐
Do you use vegetable "cooking water" in soups and sauces? Yes☐ No☐
Do you take leftover meats and vegetables, and turn them into savory stews, salads, etc? Yes☐ No☐
Do you plan the exact amounts of food you'll need and buy them accurately? Yes☐ No☐
Do you put fresh vegetables away so they'll stay fresh and nutritious? Yes☐ No☐
Do you avoid serving each member of your family more than he can comfortably eat? Yes☐ No☐
Do you make sure, each day, that your garbage pail is not sabotaging your food plan? Yes☐ No☐
If your answer is "Yes!" to each of these questions, you're all right! If not, my suggestion would be: Start today to look for food waste in your kitchen!

The court was told that Mocarsky was willing to defend the United States from an invader, but that he refused to fight under present circumstances because he believed the American people had done nothing for him.

Mocarsky, said by his mother to have supported her, his father, two brothers and a sister since he was 13, reiterated to interviewers today his willingness to defend the Nation.

"What kind of a soldier would I make, anyway, when all I've been doing is worrying about my mother and father and knowing they couldn't take care of themselves?" he asked.

"I've been treated pretty well by the Government people," he added. "I'm retiring from all of my organizing work now. I've come to the conclusion that my work just isn't appreciated. Everybody is hysterical now anyway."

The Eastern Defense Command said the action against Shea was taken "because of military necessity" and was made under the President's executive order and General Drum's previously announced policy.

OWI Survey Paints Dismal Picture of Gas Situation

to task for allowing gasoline for vacation travel last July. This lowered the effectiveness of the ban on pleasure driving and made enforcement of gasoline rationing regulations difficult, the report said.

Compliance further decreased, the report stated, as optimistic statements were made on supply improvements.

Likewise, the gasoline situation was not helped by what was described as the generosity and laxity of some ration boards in issuing B and C rations. In addition, earlier in 1943, the Office of Defense Transportation and county war boards were too generous in their treatment of some commercial vehicle operators and farmers.

Until enlarged allocations were made October 1, the report disclosed, civilian gasoline consumers in the East had legally been using about 35,000 barrels a day more than the quotas alloted them.

This was due in part to over-issuance of gasoline coupons by the Office of Price Administration and in part to underestimation of probable needs when the quotas were determined originally by the Petroleum Administration for War and the Office of Defense Transportation.

The report revealed that coupons representing more than three million barrels of gasoline have been stolen from ration boards in the 15 months since coupon rationing went into effect.

While assuring enough gasoline for essential civilian transportation, the report warned that "spot" local shortages may occur again because of such unforeseen factors as sudden large-scale military demands, submarine sinkings, disasters like the two recent Gulf Coast hurricanes and, to a lesser extent, mechanical breakdowns.

U. S. Using 23.1 Per Cent

In 1942 12.5 per cent of all gasoline produced in the East, Midwest and Southwest went to the armed forces and lend-lease. The amount had risen to 21.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1943 and to 23.1 per cent in the second quarter.

Estimated need for the last half of the year, the report stated, is 30.6, with requirements for 1944 and 1945 predicted as 36.6 per cent and 39.6 per cent, respectively.

Less automobile gasoline is being processed from each barrel of crude oil as increasing amounts of oil go into high-octane aviation fuel, toluene for explosives, butadiene for synthetic rubber, and into scores of other petroleum war products.

The report stated that need for 80-octane all-purpose gasoline is increasingly rapidly, but tetra-ethyl lead for stepping up this fuel to its high level is not plentiful. As result, automobile gasoline has already become poorer, and is expected to deteriorate further.

As to gasoline supply and allocation, the report stated that nearly seven times more petroleum products can be moved daily to the East now than in January, 1942.

Rites Friday For Mrs. Virts

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass a bushel plus a day.

When disorder of Kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Churchill Slips On Portuguese Alliance Dates

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill slipped up on his subtraction by a matter of 30 years in recounting today the length of time that Britain and Portugal had been allied.

Reporting on anti-submarine bases in the Azores, Churchill said that the alliance between Portugal and Britain dated back to 1373. Two paragraphs later he said:

"This engagement has lasted now for over 600 years and that is without parallel in world history."

Actually the time involved is 570 years.

members took part, and spent from two to six hours each over enemy territory.

The planes carried 2,750,000 rounds of ammunition.

A total of 2,500,000 pounds of bombs was dropped. (Figuring 2000 pounds to a ton, this would total 1250 ton.)

The planes carried 800 pounds of maps in all.

There was some speculation that the President was providing the "news" about the Friday raid by way of answering criticism that the President and the American Press have been "scooped" by Prime Minister Churchill, who has larded news revelations into his recent public utterances.

The Japanese air force also was on the offensive in both the Southwest and South Pacific. It made three raids against Lae, New Guinea, which were characterized as ineffective. In the Solomons, Japanese torpedo planes caused shipping damage in a raid on Guadalcanal.

Off Dutch New Guinea, Allied Liberators sank a small enemy tanker.

A spokesman also said one out of a six-ship convoy off Buka in the northern Solomons had been damaged by air bombardment.

Jap Air Force Hard Hit

Guadalcanal, Oct. 10 (Delayed) (AP).—The commander of the Allied Solomons Air Force, Maj. Gen. Nathan F. Twining of Charlotte, N. C., told a press conference today that recent air strikes, particularly one against Kahili, the big Japanese airdrome on Bougainville, practically had knocked out the enemy's air force in this area.

"After that raid, they've barely been able to hit Vella Lavella," General Twining said.

Vella Lavella, in recent weeks since American occupation of the southern portion, had been the most frequent target of Japanese airmen.

"WHAT? That Fellow Doakes HOARDING POTATOES?"

Not On Your Life—Uncle Sam Has Asked Him To Help Store This Year's Bumper Crop

Last spring your Government urged the country's potato growers to increase their production of white potatoes. In spite of wartime handicaps, shortages of labor, of fertilizer and of farm equipment, the potato growers of the State of Maine have produced the largest and one of the finest potato crops that the State has ever grown. Similar production records have been achieved by other late potato producing states.

U. S. War Food Administrator, Marvin H. Jones, has said, "This is an achievement of which every American should be proud, for every bushel of these potatoes is needed to help meet the requirements of our fighting forces and our civilian population."

But, although potatoes may be plentiful right now, Mrs. Doakes and her neighbors have not forgotten the potato shortage of the early months of 1943, nor the black market prices that they were forced to pay to keep healthful potato dishes on the family table.

So this fall, while State of Maine potatoes are in good supply and can be purchased at moderate O.P.A. ceiling prices, the Doakes' have determined to lay away a few hundred pounds for use this winter and in the early spring.

Hoarding? Heavens No! Uncle Sam not only approves but urges them and every other American family to buy potatoes this fall in large lots for home storage in order to conserve the bumper crop that the growers of the State of Maine and other states have produced, in answer to their Government's call for more food to help us and our Allies win the war.

Roy F. Hendrickson, Director, Food Distribution Administration at Washington, in a public appeal in the press, urges, "It is necessary for the grower, the food trade, the consumer and the Government to unite in a vigorous program of use and conservation of white potatoes during the harvest season to prevent waste of any part of this valuable crop. Your Government urges storage of potatoes on farms, in commercial storage houses, by wholesalers and receivers, chain stores, voluntary and cooperative retail groups, super markets and independent vegetable and food retailers."

As War Food Administrator, Marvin Jones says: "Storage of potatoes in homes must be encouraged and large quantities of potatoes must be consumed during the late fall months to relieve some of the pressure on less abundant foods."

So, Uncle Sam is drawing a sight draft on you, the wholesale and retail food trade of America, to do your part so that all the Doakes' in your community can buy and store potatoes at the moderate retail prices that will be in force under O.P.A. ceilings during October and November.

The moving and marketing of this year's bumper potato crop is one of the Government's most crucial food problems. Uncle Sam is marshalling every force at his command to drive home to the nation at large that we must get this supply of vital food under cover before cold weather sets in.

It is YOUR problem too, whether you be food wholesaler or retailer or the Mr. or Mrs. Doakes of your community. You must buy and store potatoes to the limit of your ability in order to insure an abundance of this—"Man's Greatest Food" during the winter and early spring.

As "America's Potato Railroad," it is the problem of the Bangor and Aroostook also, to provide the facilities to move this bumper crop from "Maine's Potato Empire" to all terminal markets from which it will be distributed throughout the Eastern half of the country.

The Bangor & Aroostook Railroad is proud to sponsor this vital message to the food trade of America and through them, to the Mr. and Mrs. Doakes' everywhere, in behalf of its largest and most important customer, the potato industry of the State of Maine.

Irish Potatoes are hereby designated as a Victory Food Selection for the period October 21 through November 6, 1943. Storage of potatoes in homes must be encouraged and large quantities of potatoes must be consumed during the late fall months, relieving some of the pressure on less abundant foods.

AFL Deplores Race Discrimination by Unions

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Mass., Oct. 12.—The American Federation of Labor convention adopted today a committee report deploring race discrimination in unions after an extensive debate provoked by a Negro delegate's charge that some unions gave his race only the right to pay dues.

President William Green, participating in the discussion, declared, "If I had my way every organization in the AFL would admit Negroes to membership on the same basis of equality as whites." The convention applauded his statement. Green said, however, he felt the problem could be solved only by understanding and education "and never through the application of force."

Charles J. MacGowan of the Boilermakers, the first to reply to the accusations of A. Philip Randolph of the Sleeping Car Porters, said he and his union had long been recognized as an advocate of protection for the Negro workers.

Other speakers were G. W. Bugniazet, secretary of the Electrical Workers; Roy Horn, president of the Blacksmiths; John P. Frey, president of the AFL Metal Trades Department, and W. L. Allen, president of the Telegraphers.

Frey Retorts Sharply

Frey, in a sharp retort, termed Randolph's statements "most dangerous" and the "greatest disservice to the colored race since the Negro became a free man."

Joseph D. Keenan, vice chairman for labor production of the War Production Board, expressed opposition to labor conscription and declared it would "hamstring the war effort."

Keenan suggested an "aggressive recruitment of the additional number of needed workers, plus aggressive improvement in utilization, plus aggressive increase in productivity," all of which, he said, would add up to a cure for production problems so far as they involve manpower.

"I think we can—if we are realistic—provide the incentives for such improved utilization," he added, "and increased productivity and necessary recruitment, that we can achieve our goals without having to risk any dangerous gambles in the form of regimentation of management and labor."

Full Penalty Demanded

Boston, Oct. 12 (INS).—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor demanded tonight that Mussolini and other Fascist leaders of Italy "be compelled to pay the full penalty" for their war guilt. At the same time, he revealed American labor had financed operation of secret printing presses and radios of the Italian underground.

Green addressed a Columbus Day rally. He claimed that it was the effort of organized labor which succeeded in getting the Government of the United States to remove the "enemy alien" brand from Italian nationals in this country a year ago.

"But perhaps American labor's greatest achievement in mobilizing opposition to fascism in Italy was the contribution of direct assistance to the Italian underground," he said. "By various channels, the anti-Fascist leaders in Italy were contacted and sent information and funds. These funds were direly needed for the operation of secret printing presses and radio stations to spread the truth among the people of Italy."

Nazis Fortified Wrong Leikanger, U. S. Board Finds

By the Associated Press

The United States Board on Geographic Names gave a horse laugh yesterday to the German military "experts" who spent two years fortifying the wrong town.

Dr. Meredith F. Burrill, director of the board, in a report to Interior Secretary Ickes, told of three towns in the west central section of Norway, all named Leikanger.

"One Leikanger, a small village," said Burrill, "is in the political division of More and two are in Sogn og Fordane.

"Seemingsly without checking, the German high command issued orders to fortify Leikanger in Sogn og Fordane. The Nazi commander in that section of Norway only knew of one Leikanger in Sogn and he picked the wrong one.

"He worked for two years at building a fortification before a new Nazi super-supervisor discovered the error.

GIRLS IN NITERY orchestras will soon be an accepted part of the picture, says Maurice Kafka, impresario of the Sidney music bureau. "We're already putting girl musicians in orchestras playing society parties," says Maurice, "and are planning on placing them in club bands. There are numbers of able girl musicians. Thus Mary Woods, who plays the violin and string bass, also sings, is fully capable of holding her own in any night club band." . . . P. S. Senators to Weigh Lend-Lease Inquiry

The Senate Appropriations Committee will meet today to consider proposals for a congressional investigation of lend-lease, in the wake of charges yesterday by Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana that the aid program had become a "one-way street."

Senator Ellender reiterated demands for concessions of bauxite from British Guiana, complete sovereignty and ownership of permanent bases in the Atlantic, and oil reserves from both the British and Dutch in return for lend-lease assistance.

Anouncement of the appropriations committee meeting was made by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, who said a resolution to authorize the investigation would be considered.

Goods Sold, Ellender Says

Senator Ellender charged that lend-lease goods were being sold to civilians by the nations receiving them, with those countries pocketing the cash. He said that he had been told Australia has a public debt "some 200 million dollars less than its five-billion-dollar prewar debt."

Reading from a letter written by Edward R. Stettinius, Undersecretary of State, when he held the post of lend-lease administrator, Senator Ellender said it had been estimated that Australia has spent approximately 96 million dollars in providing for U. S. armed forces there, though Stettinius also stated that it was almost impossible to evaluate the amount of reverse aid given us by our Allies.

"I have it from lend-lease experts," Senator Ellender countered, "that this 96 million dollars includes rent we paid for airports, use of docks, and money Australia spent building roads. While we are sending our boys there, they are charging rent."

Russian Charges

He charged also that reciprocal aid from Russia has been limited to supplying and servicing U. S. ships when they are in Russian ports.

Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico immediately took the floor to charge Senator Ellender with "telling tales of suspicion" without checking his facts or presenting them to an appropriate committee for investigation.

"You have talked about Great Britan," he said. "Perhaps she does have imperialistic designs—she had them in the past—but for months she stood alone and battled the hordes that would have destroyed both our government and hers if she had not.

"Give Great Britan some credit for that."

WHEN YOU CAN'T GET YOUR CHILD TO EAT!

Does your youngster just "pick" at his food? Does he push it away before it's half eaten? Then be on your guard, Mother! . . . Loss of appetite, when accompanied by paleness, weakness and lack of pep, is often a warning that the blood is low in iron! And that's something that can lead to more serious trouble.

So start building up your child's blood strength right away! Give him good old Gude's Pepto-Mangan—that reliable time-tested iron tonic which has proved its benefits for more than 50 years.

Pepto-Mangan helps make the blood redder and richer in iron! Many doctors prescribe Pepto-Mangan for rundown and growing children who need more iron to help them get back their strength and pep, their appetites and rosy cheeks.

Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists with a money-back guarantee of satisfaction! Ask for the original and only Gude's Pepto-Mangan!

Prof. Zeeman Dies; Dutch Scientist

London, Oct. 12 (AP).—Prof. Pieter Zeeman, 78, one of Holland's greatest scientists, and winner of the Nobel prize in physics in 1902, died in Amsterdam Saturday, a radio broadcast reported by the Dutch news agency, Aneta, said today.

Zeeman was renowned for his discovery in 1896 of the "Zeeman effect," the phenomena produced in spectrology by the splitting up of spectral lines in a magnetic field. The principle has been useful in studying magnetic effects and sunspots.

Zeeman also held the Henry Draper medal of the Academy of Medical Science of Washington.

Dr. Simon to Leave St. Elizabeths Post

Dr. Alexander Simon, senior medical officer of the Women's Receiving Service at St. Elizabeths Hospital, has resigned to be assistant medical director at the Langley Porter Clinic Medical Center of the University of California at San Francisco, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Simon has been connected with St. Elizabeths for 12 years. He was examining psychiatrist at Fort Myer induction center and on the teaching staff at George Washington University.

Taft Calls $300,000,000 Public School Aid Bill 'Revolutionary'

By the Associated Press

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio voiced opposition yesterday to a bill to authorize expenditures totaling 300 million dollars annually for grants to public schools, terming the plan "revolutionary" and its presentation "most unfortunate."

Taft raised his objections to the measure when Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah called it up for consideration.

The Ohio Republican first objected to taking up the bill at all, but later withdrew on this point to permit consideration during the remainder of the week.

"At no time has there been less reason for such a bill," Taft told the Senate. "It is a revolutionary proposal, one of the most revolutionary ever presented to this Congress.

"It does not relate to the war effort. It is no time to consider a Federal subsidy for common school education."

Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky supported the motion to call up the bill, asserting that "regardless of how the Senate votes on the bill itself, the measure should be disposed of."

Senator Hill of Alabama, the Democratic whip, predicted speedy Senate passage.

Support was voiced by Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia of the Finance Committee, and Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee.

Increased Federal aid has long been advocated in Congress to enable "poorer" States to increase salaries of school teachers to provide educational opportunities on a par with those of the so-called "richer States."

Teachers' Payday Still Uncertain

The Board of Education was unable to say yesterday when checks due 450 Washington school teachers on October 4 will be distributed. The checks are being delayed because of completion of withholding tax computations and additional bookkeeping work caused by numerous changes in the staff.

The 2800 regular teachers were paid Monday after a week's delay, but temporary teachers and new appointees still were waiting. Teachers have had to wait for their salaries four times in less than a year, but this has been the longest delay.

Quintuplets Use Musterole For Chest Colds!

To Promptly Relieve Coughing and Make Breathing Easier

Whenever the Dionne Quintuplets catch cold—their chests, throats and backs are immediately rubbed with Musterole—a product made especially to promptly relieve coughing, sore throat and tight, aching chest muscles due to colds. Musterole actually helps break up local congestion in the upper bronchial tract, nose and throat.

Musterole gives such wonderful results because it's what so many Doctors and Nurses call a modern counter irritant. Since it's used on the famous "Quints"—you can be sure it's just about the BEST cold-relief you can buy!

IN 3 STRENGTHS: Children's Mild Musterole for children and people with tender skin; Regular for ordinary cases and Extra Strong for stubborn cases.

"REGULAR" AGAIN AFTER 2 WEEKS!

"Cereal Brought Relief from Long Siege of Purgatives!"

Here's a sincere, unsolicited letter every disappointed "doser" will want to read:

"I was a sufferer from common constipation. Took pills or medicines of some kind, but got no lasting relief. Finally, I tried KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Have been eating it about 2 weeks now, and have stopped taking pills and things. My bowels move regularly every day. I am a KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN eater from now on!" Mr. Burl Brown, Warren, Ark.

How do scientists explain KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN'S gentle-acting, amazing relief, so familiar to thousands? Simply thus: Lack of certain cellulosic elements in the diet is a common cause of constipation. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's richest sources of these elements—which help the intestinal flora lighten and fluff up the contents of the colon, for easy, natural elimination. ALL-BRAN does not "sweep you out." Not a purgative. It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if it doesn't give you the relief you've dreamed of. Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

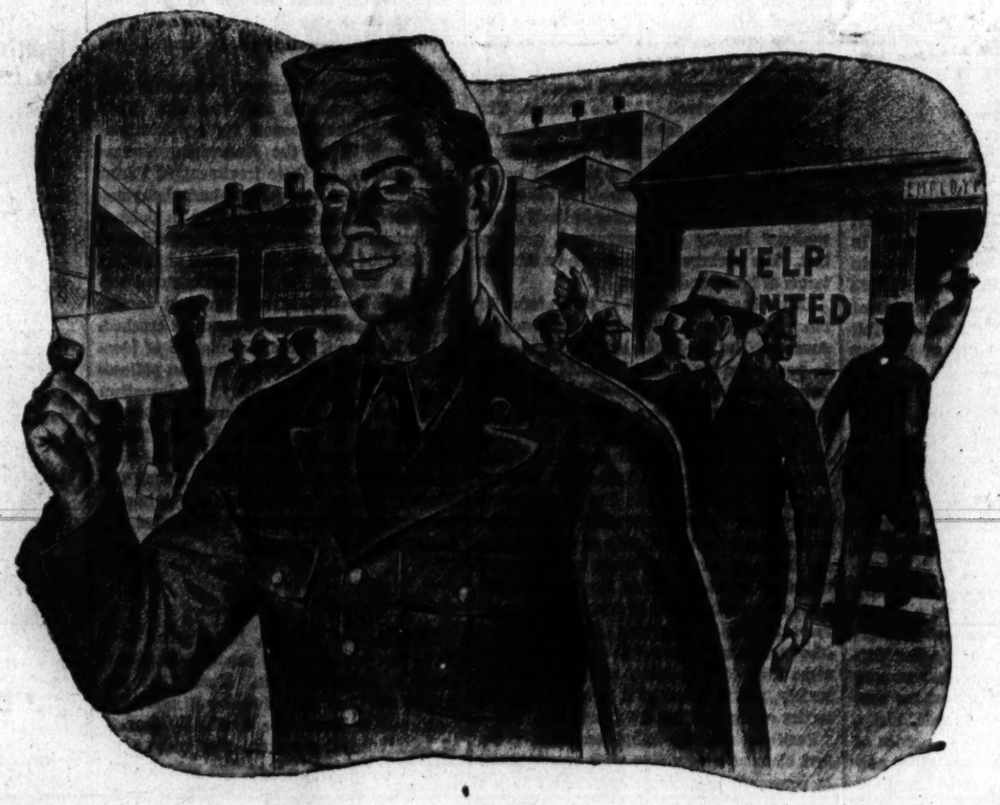
Something Good TO COME HOME TO!



Reports from our fighting forces indicate that these men worry most, in their few idle moments, about what kind of an America they are coming home to. Will there be work for them, either in their old jobs or in new ones?

The answer is largely up to us. If we do everything we can to shorten the hectic interval between wartime and peacetime production, we can more quickly receive millions of our returned military men into the jobs to which they are entitled.

Alert manufacturers are now doing this long distance planning. They are checking equipment, and preparing to discard worn-out, obsolete or inefficient tools. They know that only modern machinery can keep down the cost per unit, yet permit payment of a wage that will maintain our living standards.

Monarch will be ready with the latest in lathe improvements. Even now, relieved somewhat from Victory problems, our engineers are planning, checking, testing new developments to give you more efficient and more productive lathes than ever before.

Thus, as always, we hope to help you produce more goods for more people at lower cost. And the result will be an America which is good to come home to.

Surplus And Poverty

Walter L. Fowler, the District's budget officer, has added an ironic footnote, probably without any intention of doing so, to the Senate's exposure of neglect, filth and mistreatment of patients at Gallinger Hospital. The District, he reports, will end the present fiscal year with a tidy unobligated balance estimated at nearly seven million dollars. This surplus is accumulating in spite of a substantial payment on the city's very small debt. In other words, the District has ample funds to make Gallinger a model institution. But of course those funds are not being used for that purpose because every dime the District spends has to be appropriated by Congress.

The reason for this unobligated balance is well known. Shortages of materials and manpower because of the war have forced a virtual suspension of municipal building in spite of the city's phenomenal growth and the urgent needs of many different departments. All the city's unexpended funds and more can be usefully employed in acquiring sites, building up a reserve, and preparing for the vast amount of work that will have to be done after the war. At the same time part of this unobligated seven million dollars could have been drawn upon to meet the emergency at Gallinger Hospital and other local institutions if the District had had a government capable of dealing with its municipal problems as they arise. So long as it has no such government we must expect to see institutional poverty and surplus city funds existing side by side.

Portugal's Move

From the beginning of the war until this very week the Republic of Portugal has been in the seemingly anomalous position—one it shared with Turkey—of a neutral nation allied to one of the belligerents. In fact, Portugal's alliance with Great Britain is the oldest in existence, going back to 1373 A. D. However, at the outset of the present war, both London and Lisbon were in full agreement on the advisability of keeping Portugal neutral. Not only did Portugal then lack the means of defending herself but Great Britain was at the time in no position to aid Portugal in the event of an Axis attack upon her. Furthermore, Portugal's entry into the war would inevitably have led to the German occupation of the entire Iberian Peninsula, thus bringing the German menace right up to Gibraltar's back door.

Recently, however, the general military situation in Europe has undergone a radical alteration—so radical, in fact, that Portugal has found it possible to activate her dormant alliance with Great Britain in a manner that is likely to hasten the end of the war. Because of the victories in Tunisia, Sicily, Sardinia and Corsica, and the surrender of Italy and of the Italian fleet, the Allies now enjoy unquestioned control of the Mediterranean. Furthermore, it is now questionable whether, occupied as he is in Russia, in Italy, in the Balkans, in the Aegean and in the air over western Europe, Hitler has the men to spare for an invasion and occupation of Spain and Portugal. So when Great Britain, basing her request upon her ancient alliance with that nation, asked Portugal to accord her facilities in the Azores, the Lisbon government replied in the affirmative.

This does not necessarily mean that Portugal is about to join the war on the side of the Allies, though that may follow. The Anglo-Portuguese agreement stipulates that nothing in it "affects the continued desire of the Portuguese government to continue their policy of neutrality on the European mainland and thus maintain a zone of peace in the Iberian Peninsula." Whether Hitler reacts violently to this agreement or not, it is clear that the Allies have scored a great triumph.

The importance of the Azores to the Allies is twofold. In the first place, the right to use it will give the Allies an all-weather route for the shipment of military supplies and personnel from America to the Mediterranean. But, what is even more important, an Azores base will enable us to cover the whole of the central Atlantic with our long-range bombers. The war against the submarine, a war which has been going very well but is by no means over, will now be intensified, and the pressure on our aircraft carrier fleet which has been used in convoy duty will now be diminished.

By no means the least significant aspect of Lisbon's move is the light it throws on the judgment reached by neutrals, in particular by a neutral which up to recently was very much under the guns of the Germans, as to the way the war is going. Lisbon's judgment clearly is that the Germans are beaten, that an Allied victory is inevitable. And because of what Portugal has done, the similar belief which other neutrals must hold may now be activated.

Hitlerism At Home

A democracy is always in danger of nursing private tyrannies in its bosom which unless overthrown are apt to take over powers of government. In the early thirties this country got rid of such a menace in private banking. The public conscience, stung by the spectacle of the abuses which had flourished in the handling of other people's money, demanded and obtained broader and more rigid Government controls over the business of private banking. Another tyranny is now showing its head which sooner or later will invite the same nemesis. That is the tyranny either exercised by or available to local labor leaders under the shelter of closed-shop arrangements in our industry.

Of course, not all the local chieftains holding closed-shop contracts of one type or another behave like dictators. But the power to do so is present, and it is a power that in the nature of things invites abuse. An ugly case in point was exposed on October 3 by Agnes E. Meyer. It concerned the anarchy existing in the tight little kingdom which Tom de Lorenzo, president of the UAW-CIO No. 365, had built up in the plants operated by the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. The situation in those plants is now under investigation by a Subcommittee of the House Naval Affairs Committee under Representative Vinson. Hearings begin today. If, however, the subcommittee, which is merely anxious to see Brewster make more planes, limits its concern to seeing that this particular problem is straightened out—and there is an excellent prospect that it is in process of being straightened out—it will not have read aright the lesson for the country at large which the Brewster imbroglio posed. That lesson is that an end must be brought to the private usurpation of the powers of government which exists at the local level of labor unionism.

Tom de Lorenzo is a typical example of a union boss who has fought and won many a battle for the improvement of the workers' lot. But in 1933 he crossed the line separating leadership of free workers from autocratic control over them. In that year, specifically, he obtained a union shop agreement from the Brewster management, meaning that all the workers in the plant were unionized automatically. In due course the management, which admittedly has been weak, incompetent and constantly changing, likewise had to yield to De Lorenzo's authority, so that management followed the workers in becoming the vassals of Mr. de Lorenzo. The two developments are linked as the night the day. Under the union shop, as Mrs. Meyer reported, the workers find the real power over their destinies transferred to the union, which thus secures a transfer to itself of the workers' loyalty to management, good or bad. The workers have perforce to think in terms of bread and butter.

Labor has every reason to be grateful for the pioneer work of the De Lorenzos of America. But the tactics by which they grew to power are no longer tolerable now that unionism enjoys a security which is unchallenged and unchallengeable. Nor is the power itself tolerable, since it is tyrannical and irresponsible and usurps the functions of government itself. Perhaps a military metaphor best illustrates the new requirement from labor leadership. A battleground covering the history of this country for 50 years has been taken and occupied by labor unionism. Thus the problem has been changed from one of conquest to one of reconstruction. Dropping the metaphor, labor unionism, in order to thrive, must become part of the structure of our democratic society, and that means it must disown the tactics of the fighting De Lorenzos.

Such an accommodation requires as its first element cooperation with management. In cooperation lies the new passport to the security and prosperity of labor as well as of society. To expect our little Caesars to be cooperators is to expect the impossible, though there are exceptions. Lyautey, who helped to conquer North Africa for the French Empire, turned out to be a remarkable administrator, with a record for cooperation which was exceptional. Similarly Mr. de Lorenzo, disgusted with past management in the Brewster plants, holds out the hope that he will be able to work well with the new management under Henry Kaiser. Says Mr. Kaiser, "He (De Lorenzo) is giving me all the cooperation I could ask," meaning in the maximization of plane production. Judging from reports on the spot, the Kaiser tribute is no diplomatic gesture, but represents Mr. de Lorenzo's recognition that at last a management has taken over which he can respect. But the habit of dictatorship once contracted is difficult to shake off. For one De Lorenzo with the heart to cooperate as well as the mind to cooperate successfully, there are little Caesars all over the country who can never be expected to resign their satrapies. They think only of their despotisms as opportunities of perpetuating and extending their power and feathering their own nests.

Thus a house cleaning of Caesarism in labor unionism must be undertaken, as the Vinson Committee is bound to recognize in investigating the Brewster setup. The workers who are in bondage to the petty labor dictators are helpless. Equally at a disadvantage is the national leadership of the labor unions, since the tail has always wagged the dog in the history of labor unionism, so that the locals are pretty well autonomous. However, the issue is so full of dynamite, so threatening of a reaction that might set the cause of labor unionism back many decades, that our national labor leaders cannot ignore it.

Nor are they ignoring it. Witness a recent editorial denunciation of the closed shop in the Railroad Workers Journal, the official organ of the Railroad Yardmasters of North America. "Call it what you may," says this journal, "closed shop or union maintenance, this system, when carefully examined, is the yellow-dog contract in reverse, only now the leash is in the hands of labor leaders instead of employers." The uneasiness betrayed by the railroad worker leadership is apparent elsewhere. Why, then, is there such distaste among national labor leaders for Government action in freeing labor unionism of the local autocracy which has been fastened upon it? They should be in the van in cultivating Government action to restore the democratic process in union organization. They must realize that, since the American people are jealous of their free institutions, legislation is inescapable, whether or no the labor leaders like it.

Toleration

The memory is perhaps not now green in German minds, but today is an anniversary—the 162nd—of the Edict of Toleration issued by Joseph II, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire of the Germans. When Joseph succeeded his mother, Maria Theresa, on the throne in 1780, he inaugurated a series of anticlerical reforms, abolishing the rigid restrictions on religious life and thought which had prevailed in the empire for 150 years. He freed the state from control by religious orders and the clergy and allowed Protestants to confess their faith and practice their form of worship.

The principles which Joseph II expressed in his edict of October 13, 1781, reflected the budding liberalism of the eighteenth century. They are denied today only in those lands over which the Axis rules. "I am persuaded," he declared, "of the injurious effects of all coercion which does violence to the human conscience, and believe that the greatest benefits to religion and to the state emanate from that genuine spirit of tolerance which is agreeable to the principles of Christian charity."

It is interesting, and auspicious, that such a doctrine should have been voiced by a Germanic ruler. Here is a striking illustration of how directly the Nazis have run athwart not only the main currents of Western civilization but also the best and most enlightened traditions of their own people. The Nazi aim has been to extinguish all traces of the rationalism, humanitarianism and liberalism which have characterized the growth of Western society through the past three centuries.

To the Nazis, tolerance of any sort is only a sign of decadence and weakness. They have shown their respect for the principles of Joseph II by the Nuremberg decrees against Jews, by their treatment of Pastor Niemoeller and other Protestant clergymen who dared to raise their voices in defense of Christian decency, by their repression of the Catholic Church. In the Nazi philosophy there is no room for independence of outlook; whatever does not conform to the rigid dictates of the state must be crushed.

But let us not make the mistake of identifying this as necessarily a German philosophy. It is the philosophy of despotism anywhere. Against it, the armies of liberation are now on the march. Perhaps before another anniversary rolls round, a new edict of toleration will be proclaimed among the German people. The freedom of the human conscience will once more be reasserted and restored.

Tirpitz

Though small in size, the German fleet since the beginning of the war has been great in nuisance value. Even after the loss of the Graf Spee and the Bismarck, it continued to immobilize a valuable portion of British naval strength. For though the Tirpitz, the Prince Eugen, the Scharnhorst, the Gneisenau and other warships in the hands of the Germans have not, for a long time, truly constituted a "fleet in being," there was always the danger that one or more of these powerful vessels would elude their Allied watchers and act as commerce raiders.

That is why the successful attack on the Tirpitz by a number of midget British submarines which penetrated the remote northern Norwegian fjord where the German battleship was hiding is a development as important as it is spectacular. For of all the vessels of the German fleet, the Tirpitz was by all odds the most formidable. The difficulty the British had in sinking her sister ship, the Bismarck, clearly indicates that.

To be sure, the Tirpitz has not been sunk. But it is probable that she has been crippled to the extent that for at least a period of months she will be unserviceable. Thus, the British warships and planes allocated to watch her can now be transferred to other and more rewarding duties.

RIPPLES IN THE POOLS

We are of the earth and the hills,
And like us, they took unto themselves
The warm rains; they turned their faces
Toward the sun of the long mild days.
We and the earth and the hills are one,
And we shall stay with them, forever,
For their sun and rain, for the song
Of wild pasture streams, the beauty
Of soft and gentle ripples in the pools
When the golden leaves of autumn fall.

LANSING CHRISTMAN

Willkie's Plans

By Mark Sullivan

Depend On Platform

MR. WENDELL L. WILLKIE is to make a speech in St. Louis next Friday night, October 15. It will be an important political speech. It is so rated by the anticipatory interest it has stirred up, by the arrangements made to broadcast it widely, by the chain of incidents that led up to it, and by the fact—here stated unofficially and only on the authority of the present writer—that Mr. Willkie is a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination next year.

For a newspaperman to write as if there were any doubt of Mr. Willkie being a candidate would be to lack candor with the public. Mr. Willkie has in person visited the State, New Hampshire, in which the first presidential primary is to be held next spring, and has there conferred with local leaders about the delegation to be sent to the Republican national convention. He has spent some five days in California in consultations with groups and individuals, including local Republican leaders, Republican Governor Warren and others. Friends of his, who could not be acting without his authority, are at work in many States.

THAT MR. WILLKIE does not make formal announcement of his candidacy, nor have announcement made by others in his behalf, is due to the nature of his plans. He is working primarily to have the Republican party adopt a certain kind of platform, on domestic and foreign issues. If successful in bringing about this platform, Mr. Willkie would, of course, be the appropriate presidential nominee, almost an inevitable one. If the party adopts a platform clearly different from his, he would not want the nomination, and the party would not give it to him. To work primarily for the platform, to make the platform paramount, is a sound and candid political method. It has been practiced in the past by eminent leaders of both parties.

It is Mr. Willkie's platform that gave rise to the chain of events which brought about his decision to speak next Friday night. On September 1, some 30 Republican leaders in Missouri addressed a questionnaire to Mr. Willkie. The group included all who had been members of the Missouri delegation to the national convention of 1940, which nominated Mr. Willkie. They reminded him that they had been instrumental in bringing about his nomination. They added "We are not unfriendly now." Then they asked him nine questions, pointedly phrased. The nature of the questions can be suggested by a few.

"Do you believe that the United States should become a member of a world supra national state? If so, would it involve any limitation upon the sovereignty of the United States? Would it mean that the Army, Navy and Air Force of the United States . . . are to be placed under the control of the world state? If you favor a world state, what would you do about nations that refused to come in? Force them in by military means? Do you believe in absolute freedom of international trade? Do you believe in the free and unrestricted movement of peoples?"

AFTER THE questionnaire had been sent to Mr. Willkie, and widely publicized, there followed, from Mr. Willkie or from friends of his, complaint—why should Mr. Willkie be singled out to answer these questions, when other presidential possibilities were not? There was complaint that the questions were provocatively phrased. In this there was some truth—some of the questions are even more provocative than the ones quoted above; and there was a spirit of inquisition in the questioners' demand that Mr. Willkie answer by a deadline date, September 20.

There ensued much dialectical back-chat, engaged in by those who sent the questions, by other Republican leaders, by Mr. Willkie, by Mr. Willkie's friends, by St. Louis newspapers and the press of the country. Mr. Willkie's friends said that the questions were designed to "put him on the spot." The questioners retorted that the aim was to "put him on the record." Finally Mr. Willkie announced that he would speak "on the subjects covered by the questionnaire." This will be the speech next Friday night.

Regardless of the provocative quality of the questions as here phrased, the essence of these questions must be answered not merely by presidential candidates but by all of us. What America faces is the necessity of translating an inspiration into a practicable reality. The process involves frank facing of such questions as these.

Retired Fed. Employe

Just a word in behalf of the retired Federal employes many of whom are old, in poor health, and some have dependents to care for. The high cost of living affects them, as well as persons earning salaries and wages; yet their annuities are never increased and are subject to the present high rate of taxation.

Why does the Administration consistently oppose the sales tax? It seems to me the most painless and equitable method of raising the revenue desired. Of course, essential foods and medicines would be exempt from taxation, and the burden would fall on those most able to pay—i. e., those who shop.

Power Warfare

By Paul Schubert

The Job Ahead

WE HAVE made big progress in waging the war during 1943. A year ago, at this time, we had only driblets of men engaged. We were in action in a minor way in the Pacific Southwest, where our island actions were supported by naval task forces. We were building up antisubmarine strength in the Atlantic. We were starting to use air power from the British Isles. We were preparing to take part in the invasion of northwest Africa. We had set up world-wide systems of sea and air transport to support our later deployment.

This year we have done much more fighting.

We have become a decided factor in the Mediterranean campaign. We have become a decided factor in the air offensive in western Europe. We are a decided factor in the Atlantic U-boat warfare. We have carried out a number of amphibious island invasions in various parts of the Pacific theater, all with success. Our Navy is increasingly aggressive, and has put through a series of bombardment-challenges as invitation to the Japanese fleet to come out and fight—so far in 1943 the Japanese fleet has turned a deaf ear. . . .

ALL THIS has made good news. It has caused optimism, and a certain satisfying sense that things are going as they should. A good part of the public is convinced that both the Germans and the Japanese will fold up in short order.

Our sense of satisfaction is due to the fact that from a military point of view, we normally consider ourselves weak . . . and we are right. Never in our history has the United States been either a great military power, or a great naval power, or a great air power—great enough, that is, to be a dominant world influence through the ability to wage power warfare.

We came closest to being a power at the time of the Civil War—but then our strength was divided against itself, so that our Northern and Southern armies canceled each other out as world factors.

During the World War we never mustered military or naval strength comparable to that of our Allies or our enemies. We were useful supporters of Britain and France, and what strength we did throw into the scales may have turned the balance—but we were not even fully mobilized at the time of the armistice, and our military and naval establishment was dissipated as quickly as it had been assembled.

WE HAVE survived as a military weakling, at many moments of our history, in a world peopled by military giants. This has been possible because as a rule those giants have been lined up against one another, and there has not been enough force left over to affect us.

When Japan joined the Axis, however, and Japan and Germany became allies, the danger signals began to fly.

We were slow to act—and in 1941 we were still weak . . . and we knew it. The things that happened to us, out in the Far Pacific, were things hundreds of men had said would happen to us. "If we ever go to war with Japan, we'll lose the Philippines as sure as you're born!"

That's what they said—and that's what came to pass.

We were not so prepared for the British to lose Singapore. Britain was supposed to be a major power, able to fight big league wars. When we saw that Britain was unable to hold places like Singapore, we realized that we would have to become a power in our own right—for no one else would help us, or could help us, or should help us.

During 1944, for the first time in our history, we are going to wage power warfare.

Our 1944 Navy is going to be the greatest in the world.

Our 1944 field armies are going to number millions, not hundreds of thousands.

Our 1944 air force is going to be a super-duper air force, long past the experimental stage, able to break-trail in the evolution of mass air warfare.

As a Nation, we haven't yet realized that this is going to take place. We don't know our own strength. We don't realize that what we have done in 1943, however praiseworthy, is only small time stuff.

We don't realize that we are a power.

The truth of the matter is that we are just about the greatest single power on earth, because of our ability to combine large masses of homogeneous and capable manpower with tremendous quantities of excellent machine equipment.

But to use our power effectively, we have got to begin thinking like a power—dealing in terms of strength, rather than terms of potential strength. Beating the Germans and the Japanese is only a relatively minor chapter in the really big job that lies in front of us—the job of taking our place in the world.

Italian Colonies

I was surprised to read in the New York Times that Count Sforza desires that the United Nations shall give the three old Italian colonies—Libya, Eritrea and Somaliland—back to his country on the ground that "it may not be wise to wound the feelings of a nation which voluntarily has begun to fight the Germans so bravely as soon as the traitor Mussolini disappeared."

Only a handful of Italians resisted fascism. The great majority, from the King to the man in the street, ardently supported the now "traitor Mussolini." They gleefully acclaimed him "Il Duce" for 21 long years, including all the heads of the armed forces. Even Italians in the large colonies in foreign countries where they had lived for decades and made these countries their home became ardent Fascists even though thy were where the "traitor Mussolini" could not coerce them. I well remember that the large colony of Italians in Egypt enthusiastically applauded Il Duce on all occasions and especially at the time of the shameful invasion of Ethiopia, they become so arrogant that the Egyptian government was forced to forbid their noisy demonstrations and the wearing of black shirts on the streets.

It should be obvious that the Italians are not "bravely and voluntarily fighting the Germans" because of moral conviction. They simply think that by so doing they may win the favor of the Allies. I very much doubt if they would have fought the Germans if the latter had sent them reinforcements as Mussolini begged of Hitler at their last meeting. Neither Mussolini nor Badoglio could have done otherwise than surrender.

Libya should be kept in the stable and friendly hands of Britain whose sons died in the sands of its deserts in order that the Italians and their friends, the Germans, might be driven out of that strategic shore line of the Mediterranean.

Bixby Letter Again

Will you please print the following letters just received:

"Bodleian Library, Oxford,
September 1, 1943.

Dear Madam:

We have read with much interest the papers which you sent concerning President Lincoln and Mrs. Bixby.

I must, however, inform you that, so far as we can ascertain, the story of Bodley, or indeed of any Oxford institution, ever having possessed the Bixby letter is a myth—a widespread one, too, apparently, since we have in the past received several inquiries about it.

You may like to know that a small work by William E. Barton, "A Beautiful Blunder" (Indianapolis, 1926), gives some account of the matter. GRACE M. BRIGGS.
Assistant for the Secretary.

Eaton Paper Corp., Pittsfield, Mass.
September 27, 1943.

Dear Mrs. Tyler:

In our research for "Noble Letters of History" display, we discovered, first, the text of Abraham Lincoln's letter to Mrs. Bixby (in Volume I of Simon & Schuster's "A Treasury of the World's Great Letters"). A search for the original letter was unsuccessful, and the story on this is that the military aide to whom it was given for delivery permitted a Boston newspaper to reproduce the letter before it was delivered—and the original has never been seen since it was delivered to the recipient.

Thus, the reproduction which you saw in our display was not a photostat of the original letter.

231 Million Pounds

I read in the papers that there is 231 million pounds of butter in warehouses for military, lend-lease and other war shipping requirements. I received a letter from my son in the Army yesterday, who is in Africa, stating they had had butter that evening for dinner, the first since being over there (10 months). This butter came from Ireland, of all things, and as for beef, they don't see much of that either.

Will someone please tell me, when we on the "home front" are supposed to sacrifice and do without so "our armed forces can come first," why they can't send some of this 231 million pounds of butter to our servicemen first and let other countries be secondary?

Robbery Under Difficulties

("Thieves Loot OPA Offices."—Headline.)

Butch—What's the job this time, pal?

Slugs—Quiet. This is an OPA office.

Butch—If it's an OPA office it can't be quiet. Listen, I don't like the idea. It'll get us into trouble.

Slugs—What makes you think so?

Butch—The OPA gets everybody into trouble.

Slugs—Got cold feet, eh?

Butch—Yeah. They're frozen at the April level!

Slugs—Let's have your flashlight.

Butch—I ain't got no flashlight.

Slugs—Why not? You're always supposed to carry a flashlight on a job.

Butch—They're rationed! Where's yours? You had one when we came in.

Slugs—The battery's gone dead.

Butch—You should carry an extra battery?

Slugs—I ain't had the coupons!

Butch—I can't do anything in the total darkness.

Slugs—That's screwy. Millions of people are in the dark with OPA and they have to get along somehow.

Butch—Here's the safe. Got a drill?

Slugs—You know better. They stopped making drills for our business.

Butch—How about the soup?

Slugs—That's rationed, too! It's all being used in the war effort.

Butch—We can't blow a safe without juice.

Slugs—You know very well it takes too many points to get juices. To hell with 'em. We'll force it open. Got the crowbar?

Butch—No.

Slugs—I told ya to get a crowbar, didn't I?

Butch—I had one. But it wore out and I couldn't get it recapped.

Slugs—Why not?

Butch—I forgot to take it in twice a year for inspection.

Slugs—Well, what'll we do now?

Butch—Search me.

(The lights flash on and an OPA chief enters).

OPA chief—What's going on here?

Butch—Believe it or not we was waiting for a trolley car.

OPA chief—Congratulations! I'm glad to find a couple of fellows here who are not looking for gas!

Sour Oranges

The article appearing in The Post under the date of October 1, relative to the early movement of Florida oranges under the column heading "Stores Limiting Customers to But Six Oranges," is misleading to the public.

I quite agree that some of the fruit moved the first of October is not of the best quality. Under existing maturity laws of the State it is impossible to keep all immature fruit off the market. Many groups of growers and grower organizations are in favor of raising the maturity standards to such a point that all fruit shipped at this time of the year may be eaten with gusto.

The most amazing piece of misinformation printed was as follows: "The first pickings are of a sour orange and the sweet variety will not come in until the latter part of November." May I explain. The true sour orange is never sold commercially for human consumption. It is used for marmalades while the seeds of this orange produce the trees upon which are grafted or budded various varieties of edible oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. The "sweet variety" mentioned is the Hamlin and Parson Brown. As is true of all citrus fruit, the longer they hang on the tree the higher the sugar content. Thus the sour variety mentioned and the sweet variety are one and the same orange but picked at different times—immature and fully mature.

Postwar Jobs

Most leaders in the construction industry agree thoroughly with your editorial of October 6 which warns against relying on "postwar restoration of a magnified WPA" as a means of solving the peacetime employment problem.

The Producers' Council and other interests in the building industry firmly believe that private enterprise can build up a record-breaking volume of postwar construction and employment, with minimum participation by the Federal Government, provided industry accepts the responsibility and acts now to lay the necessary plans.

However, as your editorial suggests, construction of public works cannot be eliminated entirely from consideration. There is in every part of the country a vast pent-up need for legitimate public works such as schools, hospitals, water and sewerage systems, highways, bridges, and other public improvements. Projects like these, which for the most part will be financed by local, county and State governments, are continuously needed to supply the facilities for industry and commerce and improve living standards. Managing Director, Producers' Council.

Senators' Testimony

By Ernest Lindley

Reactions From Britain

JAMES B. RESTON, the able London correspondent of the New York Times, reported a few days ago on British reaction to the testimony of the five United States Senators just returned from their world tour. Although there has been little editorial comment over there, British officials, Mr. Reston reported, resent the sharper criticism, wonder why the Senators spoke up on the eve of the three-power conference, and fear the trend toward "economic nationalism" in the United States.

LINDLEY

The resentment of the British is entirely understandable. Some of the points made by the returning Senators implied that the British are not pulling their full weight in the war—for example, they are hoarding their oil reserves in the Middle East. All the facts concerning the petroleum supplies of the Allies have not been made public and possibly cannot be for military reasons. However, as the President pointed out, it was not feasible, on account of the long hauls involved, to make the fullest use of the Middle Eastern sources of petroleum until the Mediterranean was reopened.

It does not follow that there is no substance in any of the complaints filed by the Senators. The complete dedication to winning the war which is apparent in Britain has not stretched in all cases to outlying parts of the Empire. There have been instances in the last two years in which Washington has had to request London to bring pressure to overcome business-as-usual practices in sections of the empire, including India.

SOME OF the criticisms voiced by the Senators—both of the British and of our own foreign services—were due to the fact that so much of their traveling was in areas which traditionally have been under British control or influence. The British had more and better representatives. They controlled communications and the flow of news.

Since the United States has not been an imperial power to any great extent, and since the war fortunately is being fought at a distance from our shores, it was inevitable that most of the air bases we have built should be on the sovereign territory of other nations. Mr. Reston reports that if the United States will join with Britain and Russia in establishing a real world authority to enforce the peace, every base in the British Empire will be open to us. British sources in the United States have indicated as much. There is very little doubt that Britain would welcome a complete and enduring partnership with us in enforcing the peace, carrying forward indefinitely the interlocking of our armed forces and military and naval installations that has been achieved during the war.

But the questions and criticisms posed by the returning Senators did not refer to naval or air bases. They were concerned with commercial rights. Some of the airbases built or improved with American money during the last two years will be useful for postwar international air transport, others will not. We cannot even use for commercial purposes our own military air fields on the bases in the Western Hemisphere leased from Britain in 1940 under the destroyer-base deal.

The future of the international airways is only one of the problems which are sure to cause friction if they are not settled by comprehensive decisions between the United States and the governments of Britain and the dominions.

The British have been worried by the possibility that we will crawl back into isolation after the war. Judging by present trends, they have been unduly worried about this. But it is not clear that the British, or at least all elements in Britain, really want us to pursue the opposite course. They want our military and diplomatic collaboration. But do they want the United States to become a greater factor in international trade? If we are going to keep our eyes turned outward—if we are going to take a part commensurate with our strength in enforcing the peace of the world—obviously we are going to insist upon getting the business opportunities which go with this role.

MR. RESTON intimates that a world-wide grab for trade territory would endanger our relations with Britain and Russia. He writes of British fears that we are resurrecting the practice of the old-fashioned Yankee trader. The London Economist speaks of an "explosion of economic nationalism in the United States." This is a curious inversion of terminology. There was nothing in the reports of the returning Senators which indicated a trend toward "economic nationalism" as the phrase is understood in the United States. To the contrary, the trend appears to be the other way—toward the Yankee trader and international commercial competition.

It is perhaps unfortunate that the Senators happened to return from their tour on the eve of the three-power conference. It is unfortunate that in some cases they gave voice to loose complaints or drew conclusions from only fragmentary knowledge. But it would be most unfortunate if the British did not recognize that the Senators' concern for postwar business opportunities for the United States is a sign of the waning of isolationism. They should face the fact that if the United States is going to act as a world power, it will also have a large merchant marine and international air transport interests and will vigorously seek trade outlets. There is reason to think that some of the top people in the British government realize this, just as intelligent Americans realize that the British cannot exist without a considerable volume of earnings from exports, shipping and other services.

The Gallup Poll . . .

Treaty Ratification By Entire Congress Favored in Survey

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 12.—With the Russian-British-American conference in the offing, treaty making looms as one of the most important jobs facing Washington in the future.

The bitter fight over the League of Nations after the last war and, in fact, the present struggle over the Fulbright resolution in the Senate indicates that again a major obstacle facing U. S. treaty makers will be the problem of winning the necessary two-thirds approval of the Senate for ratification of treaties.

Consequently, in Washington the question has arisen as to the public's attitude toward a possible constitutional revision calling for a majority vote of the whole Congress instead of the present two-thirds majority of the Senate.

Anticipating the time when this issue will be uppermost in American minds, the Institute has just completed two studies—the first to find out how much the American public now knows about constitutional requirements regarding treaties, and the second, to gauge their attitude toward the present two-thirds rule.

The first study brings to light the startling fact that fewer than half of all U. S. voters with college training know what the present requirement is. More than two-thirds of all voters with high school training and more than three-fourths of all voters with a grade school education are unaware of the present requirement.

In the second study, the following question was put to all voters to get an indication of what they thought the law should be:

"Which of these would you favor as the best way to have peace treaties approved after the war—(1) Approval only by the President, (2) Approval by the President and a majority of the whole Congress, or, (3) Approval by the President and two-thirds of the Senate."

The vote of the whole country shows only 7 per cent favoring a method calling for approval only by the President. Fifty-four per cent favor approval by the President and a majority of both houses of Congress. Only 25 per cent favor approval by the present method; that is, by the President and two-thirds of the Senate. Fourteen per cent have no opinion on the issue.

Mann Sees Hope for Germany In Postwar Society of Peoples

Self-Exiled Novelist Gives Preview of Tonight's Lecture

Thomas Mann, self-exiled German novelist, yesterday spoke feelingly and in typically cadenced tones of the future of his native land as he gave a brief preview of his lecture at 8:15 tonight at the Library of Congress on "The War and the Future."

Dr. Mann, whose famed prose will be seen next in his most recent work, the final book of the "Joseph" trilogy, enjoyed a large after-luncheon cigar as he predicted that postwar Germany can return again to its old form of "spiritual universalism" to join the new society of peoples.

"One must hope that Germany will find its way back to the old, real Germany," Dr. Mann declared as he recalled the homeland he once know and loved. "The whole experiment of world conquest is a disturbed expression of old German universalism, corrupted by power politics.

World Must Defend Itself

"When universalism becomes a matter of power politics, then the world must rise and defend itself. But Germany can recover again to be able mentally to join a new society of peoples. Unless she is won over to this idea, it will be difficult to keep peace in future years.

Asked if he felt that Nazi-trained youths are too thoroughly indoctrinated with German ideals to accept other forms of government, he replied that "the uprising of students and professors recently in Munich against national socialism shows that they are not corrupted."

Concerning Italy, where he has traveled and studied extensively, Dr. Mann said: "The problem of Italy after the war is even easier than that of Germany. Italians are too politically intelligent to be real Fascists."

Principal Choice

The most fundamental question regarding Italy, he added, was its choice between becoming a republic or a kingdom.

DR. THOMAS MANN

Although the newest book of the "Joseph" series will not appear in this country until January because of production and manufacturing difficulties, copies already are in circulation in Sweden. Translations must go to Switzerland by airplane, two or three pages at a time, for binding, and Dr. Mann himself has no idea how they are transported across occupied territory.

He has completed about 100 pages of his newest novel, in which he is dealing for the first time with music despite its strong influence on his past work. Thus far he has chosen no title, but he confides that it is the life story of a musician, with scenes in a small German city, then Munich, then Bavaria.

Dr. Mann said the book probably will take another year and a half to complete.

"I find it advisable to interrupt myself to gain new perspectives," he observed. "I always need a long time."

New Tires Give 85% Crude Wear, Dewey Says

Rubber Director Bradley Dewey urged cessation of "academic arguments" on the merits of synthetic rubber tires yesterday, stating unequivocally that the all-synthetic tread of new automobile tires will wear from 85 to 90 per cent as well as that of the best first-line tire of pre-Pearl Harbor days.

Dewey's assertion was made before a meeting of the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers in New York at a time when reports were current in various sections of the country that synthetic rubber tire performance is far below expetcations.

The rubber director disclosed that all-synthetic passenger tires are now being made at the rate of almost a million a month.

There is evidence, Dewey said, that the synthetic rubber tire is probably more easily damaged than the pre-Pearl Harbor tire. But the obvious answer is, he added, that owners must take care of their tires.

Dewey conceded that truck and bus tires have limitations to performance, particularly when overloaded and driven at high speeds over hot pavements. Even the use of rayon cord and up to 30 per cent crude rubber has not obviated the danger of tread cracking and chipping.

"Three months ago these difficulties looked almost insurmountable. Today, great progress has been made. Under severe test conditions some of the pre-Pearl Harbor first quality controls have been known to fail at lower mileages than the best of the new synthetics."

John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., said in an Associated Press dispatch from Buffalo, N. Y., Monday that tests of synthetic truck tires at 45 miles per hour show a ration of performance of only 35 to 55 per cent of that of natural rubber tires.

Dewey admitted that "the synthetics are not as good as former truck tires and at best it will be many months before they are."

Senate Group Warned of Crash

By the Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming warned Senate postwar investigators yesterday that neither the Government nor a few corporations "can manage the economic system for the benefit of all the people" after the war.

In a lengthy report as chairman of a Subcommittee on Industrial Reorganization, he told the Postwar Economic and Policy Committee that "private enterprise cannot endure the competition of either monopoly or government."

He said money in private hands, estimated at $77,500,000,000 as of August 31, must be put to work in the postwar world to avoid "the greatest economic disaster that this or any other nation every suffered."

He recommended:

1. Passage of a Federal charter law designed to free organized business from Government "regimentation," and the people "from arbitrary private power," by defining corporate powers and responsibilities.

2. Passage of laws dealing with international cartels to require at least the registration with the Government "of every cartel agreement" so that the people "will not be at the mercy of secret treaties never submitted to the State Department."

3. Establishment in the War Production Board or in a special court of an appellate tribunal to which businessmen may appeal from priority orders in the postwar period.

4. A "realistic" reform of the patent laws.

Ex-Officer Accused Of Impersonation

Charged with impersonating an Army lieutenant, Robert W. Sower, 25, of Nampa, Idaho, pleaded not guilty yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Bond was set at $1000 pending a preliminary hearing tomorrow.

Agents of the FBI said Sower was dishonorably discharged from the Army several weeks ago as a first lieutenant, but that he came to Washington later and represented himself as an Army officer in order to obtain a $5 loan from the management of a hotel.

Senate Group Weighs Postwar Peace Agency Resolution

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Under strong Administration pressure to act now, a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee may accept today a postwar resolution which would commit the Senate, treaty-making body, to an international agency backed by the powers of economic, military and naval sanctions.

If the subcommittee agrees at its session this morning, however, the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee still must act before the resolution can be brought to the Senate floor. Several members led by Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota already have expressed their reluctance to report out a resolution at this time.

The proposed resolution, drafted by Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas, advocates U. S. participation in an international agency to keep the peace, first through establishment of international justice, arbitration and negotiation, and in the end of imposition of economic, military and naval sanctions.

Subcommittee Republicans, like Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan, have insisted upon phraseology in the resolution, it was understood, which would protect the sovereign identity of the United States and make it clear the Senate was not passing upon an international state.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado) last night in a radio talk cautioned the Nation to "proceed with profound thought in the dangerous field of cooperation by military force."

"Americans who smugly advocate policing the world with our military might have not consulted human nature sufficiently," Johnson asserted. Empire building and exploiting the world and policing the world will ever go hand-in-hand."

"Can we, with a clear conscience, point with pride to our well established policy of anti-imperialism and at the very same time employ our military strength to promote and insure the success of British imperialism?" he asked.

Unemployment Drops to 13 Pct. Of 1940 Figure

Washington unemployment has dropped to 13 per cent of its 1940 figure, the District Unemployment Compensation Board said yesterday coincident with the statement that the office mailed only 497 checks last week, compared with 3785 checks during the same week in 1940.

The same figures for 1942 and 1941 are 984 and 2490, respectively.

At the same time, records showed that the unemployment compensation taxes whose payment was liberalized in a bill that has been in effect since July 1, saved District employers well over a million dollars in the last quarter, compared with the payments in the three months preceding July.

Officials pointed out that the new payment schedules still leave DUC funds "more than amply filled" and that compensation payments here are more liberal than in any State.

Senate Passes 2 D. C. Measures

The Senate yesterday voted favorably on two District measures, one providing that licenses must be procured to carry any weapon capable of being concealed, and the other permitting Lansburgh & Bros. department store to install steam-heating pipe lines.

Three States' Elections Eyed By Politicians

By Arthur Hachten
International News Service Staff Writer

National political leaders are focusing their attention upon three State elections next month—in New York, New Jersey and Kentucky—for clews to the national balloting in 1944.

In the New York race for Lieutenant Governor, and in New Jersey's gubernatorial contest, the Republican nominees were believed to have the edge, with the Democrats' choice for Governor of Kentucky considered likely to win in a close race.

However, the Democrats were not conceding defeat in New York nor in New Jersey, and the Republicans believed they have a good chance to capture Kentucky.

Republicans Hopeful

Optimistic reports from GOP compaigners in Kentucky were surprising to politicos here, since that State normally is Democratic. A Republican victory there in November, it was believed, would be distinctly bad news for the Democrats looking to 1944.

Kentucky went Republican occasionally when the GOP was in the ascendency nationally, but since President Roosevelt entered the White House it has been going Democratic consistently. A break now would be considered significant.

The Republican choice is Simeon S. Willis of Ashland, a former justice of the State's Supreme Court. State High Commissioner J. Lyter Donalson is the Democratic nominee. At the outset of their contest there was supposed to be a truce on national issues, but reports indicate that the New Deal has been injected into the race.

Contest in New York

Politicians usually right on New York elections said they would be surprised if Lieut. Gen. William N. Haskell (retired) carries the Democratic banner to victory in his race against Republican State Senator Joe R. Hanley to fill the vacant office of Lieutenant Governor.

Democrats insisted upon an election; Republicans opposed, and the courts finally decided there must be an election. The Democrats waged their court fight after consulting President Roosevelt.

Since Gov. Thomas E. Dewey carried the Empire State by a majority of about 600,000 in 1942—a landslide—it was inferred by political observers that the Administration wanted a test of party strength next month to see how public opinion is running.

Even a close result with Hanley victorious would be encouraging to the Democrats nationally, in view of their sharp defeat two years ago.

Supporters of Dewey for the Presidency undoubtedly would be disturbed if the Democrats win the Lieutenant Governorship, whereas a thumping GOP victory, it is believed, would be hailed by his friends as evidence he could carry the State as GOP nominee in 1944.

In New Jersey a few weeks ago it was generally conceded that the Republicans certainly would elect their nominee for Governor in view of the bitter fight between Gov. Charles Edison and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City.

But since they have both indorsed Mayor Vincent J. Murphy of Newark for the Governorship, the Democrats' hopes have risen. Former Governor and Senator Walter E. Edge is the Republican nominee.

Steinbeck Says Italians Resent Release as Captives Owing to Food Shortage

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean War Theater.—If the Italians had not surrendered when they did the Italian prisoner situation might well have become a very serious thing. However, by surrendering and by some mysterious transmutation becoming allies instead of enemies the difficulty shows signs of clearing up. As allies, we can insist that they shift for themselves. As enemies, we had to take care of them.

The dangers involved in the situation did not become immediately apparent. Reports came in while the fighting and prisoner taking went on in Africa and the figures were never correlated. It was considered just one more of the horrors of war. But in Sicily the difficulty came rapidly to a head.

The trouble was that guards, set to watch prisoners, could never keep track of how many they had. If they went out with 65 to mend a shell hole, they were just as likely to come back with 150. This was, perhaps, gratifying, because in wartime it is a good thing to have lots of prisoners, but the matter rapidly got out of hand. Starting out in the morning with Giuseppe Ladrini, specifically noted on the list, the prisoners' stockade closed at night on Giuseppe, Mrs. Giuseppe and four assorted Giuseppe offspring. And all of them were willing to swear that they had honorably surrendered as prisoners of war. The reason, of course, was not hard to see. Prisoners are not only fed but paid.

Demand to Be Let In

One rattled guard swears that on the night of an air raid he, as instructed, opened a barbed wire gate and told his 302 prisoners to scatter on the hillside. He says that when the all clear sounded he opened the gates and blew a whistle, the signal for his prisoners to get back into the stockade and be locked up. At seven the next morning 2214 were in the incloSure and they were still coming. In despair, he closed the gate and kept the clamoring crowd out. They shouted that they had a right to be in there because they were prisoners, and the captain of the guard couldn't tell them apart, so he didn't know which ones he was slighting.

That was just one little incident, but the dangerous situation grew worse. One set of guards devised a method of issuing identification tags so that those who had the slips of paper could get into the prison camp. They worked beautifully for a day. At night they had 522, just as they had in the morning. But not the next day. Ingenuity had been at work. Seven hundred were in the second night and half the town charged the gate the third day. It was then discovered that two-thirds of the population was already carrying forged identifications as prisoners and that a nice little business was set up for selling prisoners' slips.

It must not be supposed that the prisoners were lazy. They worked like dogs at anything they were set to do. They needed no guards except to keep newcomers out. They just wanted to eat and they were willing to do anything for the privilege.

Boys Who Made the Grade

Gradually, in some of the Sicilian towns the badge of a bona fide prisoner became a kind of order of nobility. A man who could prove that he really belonged to an American prison camp was looked up to and admired and the girls of his community set their caps for him. People pointed to him with a certain amount of pride as one of their boys who had made the grade.

Meanwhile the guards were going crazy. They were torn between the military glory of having prisoners and the inability of making supplies go around.

This was the situation when the Badoglio government doublecrossed the Italian people by surrendering.

Instantly, the situation cleared up. The gates were opened and the prisoners were released, much to their disgust. No longer were they able to depend on the guards. It was every man for himself, without social background or pull.

And now there will be no trouble. The prisoners will all be Germans and so far they have not learned the beauty and homeliness of the prison camp. Perhaps, in time, they will discover it. But a German does not arouse motherliness in our soldier.

He lacks the genius of being a prisoner, that became so highly developed in Sicily.

If nothing else, the surrender of the Italian army relieved a lot of harassed guards of a burden that taxed their ingenuity and their tact. They at least are glad the Italians are out of the war.

Depot Foreman Great Space-Saver

Walla Walla Airbase, Wash. (AP). Dan C. Youngman, who made saddles before the war, is showing the air service command how to save space.

Sub-depot crating department foreman, Youngman figured out a crate for propellers that needs only three bolts and may be used over and over. It won commendation from ASC officers.

He also has devised more compact containers for wing tips, wing sections, landing wheels, ailerons and fuel cells, some of which save as much as 35 per cent in shipping space.

Overweight Motor Oil Costs You Dear

Be sure of changing to your Lightest possible grade—by having your engine Winter OIL-PLATED

Sure as you live...sure as your car must live... you'll want a change to the lightest oil your engine can use this Winter of War.

Waiting for a "real cold day" before draining overweight oil that drags when it chills, is like waiting for your battery's doom. This drag of overweight oil wastes gasoline, too. And even worse is the big chance of internal damage because overweight oil won't squirt and spray into friction zones of your engine quickly. For the sake of your battery, your gasoline coupons, and your engine, change to your lightest practical grade of oil.

You can quit wondering whether "one grade heavier might be on the safe side." You can be as safe as possible with your engine OIL-PLATED by even your lightest suitable grade of Conoco Nth motor oil. Its load-carrying capacity is doubled by synthetic means. And this also creates "magnet-like" action to keep lubricant closely fastened to inner engine surfaces, in the form of OIL-PLATING. Even the lightest grade of Conoco Nth oil will give your engine the high protection of OIL-PLATING. Ask Your Mileage Merchant today to recommend the grade suitable for your car. Dread Engine Acid is Fought by OIL-PLATING Normal combustion always leaves acids inside of your engine when it stops.

Formerly it seldom stood idle long. Soon mileage and speed heated your engine enough to oust acids.

But nowadays rationing may force long rests, while corrosive acids gnaw. To combat corrosion, metals are plated. You combat acid corrosion with your engine OIL-PLATED.

Shut Out, Arcaro Up, Wins Laurel Stakes

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Oct. 12.—An Army corporal from Fort Riley got on the crowded elevator last night in the Chase Hotel, where the Yankees were celebrating their World Series victory over the Cardinals.

On the lift was another passenger, who was feeling no pain. He was Bill Dickey. His home run a few hours before had won the World Series.

POVICH

"Hi ya, Bill," the corporal said. "I didn't think you'd remember me in these clothes."

"Sure, I remember you," said Dickey. "We pitched you high and inside all the time. I remember, if we pitched you outside it was boom, hey, what's your name?"

The name was Joe Gantenbein, former infielder of the Athletics, who went into the Army a couple of years ago. The name doesn't matter. What is important, we think, is the fact that Bill Dickey even at a time when he is feeling no pain, looks at a guy in a soldier's uniform. Doesn't recall his name, but remembers him clearly as a fellow who couldn't hit an inside pitch.

How are you going to beat a team with a catcher like that?

It illustrates what a tough job the Cardinals had in the World series. Onthesurface, Yankee pitching won the series, but Yankee catching was a heluvan item. Chandler and Borowy and Russo weren't bothered much about how to pitch to the Cardinals. Back there behind the plate, Bill Dickey was calling the tune on every ball. He knew how to play his Cards. Dickey knew his Joe Gantenbeins.

The Yankees beat the Cardinals with their skill at either end of the 60-foot pitching lane. With Dickey exploiting the weakness of each Cardinal who came to the plate, Yankee pitchers held the St. Louis club to seven earned runs in the five-game series. That's an average of one and two-fifths runs per game. Small wonder, then, that the Cardinals couldn't win.

There was talk among disgruntled St. Louis folks that the Cardinals quit cold in the final game after failing to get a run out of Chandler in the early innings when they had him on the ropes. But that is being unkind to the Cardinals. They didn't quit. They simply reacted like a lot of other good National League clubs who were licked by the Yankees in a World Series. The impossibility of it all simply induced what looked like a kind of listlessness.

There didn't seem to be any bounds to the Yankees' scope. At least the Cardinals must think so by this time. In that fifth game yesterday, with men on second and first and one out, the Cardinals thought they had at least one run when Slats Marion lashed a grounder toward Frankie Crosetti who was set for an easy play. All of a sudden, the ball took a fiendish bad hop over Crosetti's head, but not quite. Crosetti grabbed the bad hop and threw to second for a force play. The Cards couldn't win, even on a bad hop.

The Cardinals lost the World Series in the eighth inning of the third game, if the loss of the series can be traced to any one inning. That was the time, you remember, when the Cardinals were out in front, 2 to 1, behind the three-hit pitching of Rookie Alpha Brazle. They had just won the second game with Mort Cooper, and were now threatening to take four in a row to duplicate their 1942 victory over the Yankees.

The Yankees scored five runs in that eighth inning when the Cardinals' defense collapsed at three different points. First was Center Fielder Harry Walker's fumble of Lindell's single to center that opened the inning. With Lindell now on second, Stirnweiss could bunt. First Baseman Ray Sanders made a good play on the bunt and then a bad one. He scooped the ball up prettily, but for some unaccountable reason took his own good time throwing to third for a play on Lindell. When he got the ball, finally, from Sanders, Kurowski had to put it on Lindell in the same motion. There was no chance for an easy tag, and so when Lindell landed in his lap, Kurowski dropped the ball. A bit later Bill Johnson tripled and the Cardinals lost the ball game.

If there was a complete bust among the Cardinals, aside from Walker Cooper, then the fellow was Lou Klein, the second baseman. Klein booted only two balls, but was a total loss in other respects. He made only three hits during the series, one a roller down the third-base line, one a luck-anointed Texas leaguer and the third a rap into the pitcher's box. He got on base only five times during the series. In the ninth inning yesterday with one out and the tying runs on base, Klein was the most dismal strikeout victim of the series, fishing futilely after three outside sucker pitches thrown at him by Chandler with positive contempt.

Incidentally, Manager Billy Southworth is no longer the fair-haired boy of the St. Louis baseball-writing press. The newsmen here don't love him any more. Seems like Southworth barred them from the Cardinals' dressing room and so we read:

"Even the usually tranquil Billy Southworth lost his poise. Cogitating over what ailed his men, he apparently decided that they lost their fine edge in having to talk with baseball writers. And not until after the fifth game would he again honor them with an exchange of words. But the trouble was that after the fifth game was over, anything that Billy might say or do was unimportant." Whoops.

Terry Sought By Two Clubs As Manager

Former Giant Boss Expected to Return To Majors as Head Cubs or Dodgers

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

St. Louis, Oct. 12.—Behind the scenes in the World Series show there was quite a bit of action indicating that William Harold (better known as plain Bill) Terry will be back in baseball as a manager in 1944.

Just where the one-time boss of the New York Giants will land is not quite definite yet, but the likely choice seems to lie between the Chicago Cubs and Brooklyn Dodgers. The latter offers interesting possibilities because it was Sweet William who once wanted to know "is Brooklyn still in the National League?" That was back in '34, and when the shooting was over the Dodgers had dumped Bill's Giants out of a pennant.

Feels Urge to Return

Bill's been down on the farm for a year now and apparently is getting the old urge for the diamond again. He was at the series as a sports writer, but it is known that he saw more than a little bit of powers that be in both the Brooklyn and Chicago organizations.

In the New York half of the series, he was to have "chinned" with Phil Wrigley, president of the Cubs, but Phil didn't get to Manhattan. However, in the St. Louis end of the set, he had quite a chat with Jim Gallagher, the Cubs' general manager, and the assumption is they talked about more than Bill's cattle and crops.

Apparently the Cubs have about given up on Jimmy Wilson as their pilot although no one is saying a word about it now, because Jimmy's contract runs until December 31. One report says the club is willing to pay Terry $30,000 a year to take the job.

Busy Talking Baseball

Although Terry didn't see Wrigley in New York, he keut busy nevertheless. He had at least two meetings with George V. McLaughlin of the Brooklyn Trust Co., the bank that holds a lot of the Dodger purse strings. McLaughlin and Sweet William have been friends for a long time and McLaughlin has long had an idea Terry would be a good man to manage the Bums.

However, although President Branch Rickey has given Leo Durocher the gate, there never has been any apparent burning deire on the part of Branch to hire Terry. So if McLaughlin starts to pitch to get Bill into the spot, there's going to be some fun in Flatbush.

Slide Rule Scores in 'Cap At Jamaica

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, New York, Oct. 12.—A holiday throng of 30,709 was on hand for the war relief program here this afternoon and saw W. E. Boeing's Slide Rule, hero of the Arlington Classic, add the Interborough Handicap to his list of triumphs. Sharing top weight of 124 pounds with John Marsch's disappointing favorite, Occupation, Slide Rule rallied for last place in the field of nine to take the $6375 first award in a breeze by four lengths.

Overdrawn, from the Dearborn Stable, saved the place by a half length from Mrs. A. K. Weast's Equistar, with Occupation a poor fourth. Slide Rule, well beaten in the Lawrence Realization in his previous outing, returned $17.50 for $2 and ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 2-5 under Jack Westrope.

It was hoped that the profits from the day's program would run into six figures. Of the proceeds, 60 per cent will go to National War Funds, Inc., which includes USO, United Seamen's Aid and War Prisoners' Aid, and 40 per cent to be divided among the AWVS, Inc., and hospitals in this area.

Slide Rule now has won 6 of 15 starts and $92,000 in his campaign as a 3-year-old.

Machine Gunner Brubaker Is Seeking Grid Wars Now

Veteran of Many Fronts Reports for Duty With Maryland U. Squad and Has High Hopes

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

It must be a novel experience for Hal Brubaker, after 2½ years, to try to catch passes rather than duck 'em.

Brubacker, a 6-foot, 205-pound end who recently reported to Coach "Doc" Spears for a tryout with the University of Maryland football team, has been ducking passes—passes in the form of machine-gun bullets and detonation bombs—thrown at him and his Army pals with deadly intent by Dorniers, Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfes.

He's been in some tough spots, in Iceland, Greenland, England and Australia, where German and Jap bombers and reconnaissance planes paid regular visits and dropped bombs without discrimination.

Of course, Brubaker, a corporal in charge of a machine-gun crew, returned the compliments—with pretty much success.

Plenty of Planes Downed

His outfit was officially credited with five enemy planes and a few more unofficially. Ack-ack fire, he says, brought down some more, which he thinks his machine gunners got first. They didn't get credit for those. All in all, he's seen some 10 or 12 enemy planes

Orange Bowl Game Gets Conditional Approval of ODT

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Oct. 12.—Director Joseph Eastman of the Office of Defense Transportation has given conditional approval of the Orange Bowl football classic New Year's Day, Orange Bowl chairman A. A. Ungar announced today.

Ungar said tickets would go on sale November 1, and would be confined to Dade (Miami) County because of ODT's request that the game be "localized."

C. F. Baldwin and R. B. Freeman of the Orange Bowl committee called on Eastman and obtained the green light, Ungar said.

Chevy Chase Golf Draws Sammy Byrd

Bob Barnett's fourteenth annual pro-senior tournament tomorrow at Chevy Chase Club took on added importance yesterday when Sammy Byrd, winner of one of the two major open tournaments of the year, notified Barnett he would be here for the tournament.

Byrd's partner will not be known until tomorrow afternoon as all pro partners will be hat drawn. Barnett holds the event each fall for senior members of the club and usually comes up with an outstanding field of professional partners.

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond's North-South Open champion, and Tommy Galloway of the Hermitage Club in Richmond, also accepted Barnett's invitation yesterday. Trick shot artist Joe Kirkwood already has promised to play and will give his demonstration of unorthodox golf shots between 4:30 and 5 p. m.

All local professionals who have not contacted Barnett are asked to do so today. The field will be made up of at least 25 teams.

Greentree Racer Sets New Record

With Regards Close Competitor All Way; Attendance 12,000; Double Pays $91.80

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 12.—The Greentree Stable's Shut Out and Jockey Eddie Arcaro, a well-known turf team, added another big purse to their collection before a Columbus Day crowd of 12,000 here today.

Making his first appearance of the fall season hereabouts, Shut Out came with a bold stretch rush to defeat Miss Josephine Grimes' With Regards by a neck margin in the $10,000 added Laurel Stakes. The Calumet Farm's Son of Peace forged into third position a length behind the battle for first money.

Shut Out, eligible for numerous stakes during this meeting, had to show dazzling s.ed in the late stages to take the chief money. His time of 1:42 2-5 set a new record for the Laurel Stakes being run over this track for the first time and it was only a fifth of a second over the track record jointly held by Shuffle Along and Tred Avon. The condition of Shut Out was no secret to the crowd of 12,000 and he was made the favorite. After all was said and the race was run the Greentree star paid $4.60.

With Regards, second in the Capital Handicap opening day, ran away from his rivals in the early stages. Jockey Johnny Longden had him away on top and the Jack High colt opened six length as the field of seven went up the backstretch. Bold Captain was second and Shut Out was third.

Approaching the stretch, With Regards began to bear out and Shut Out began to move. With Regards then came in during the straightaway, but Arcaro refused to go to the outside. He charged the Equipoise colt through on the rail and his mount kept coming to win going away.

Aftermath Rehash

World Series Not Up to Par This Year, Writer Concludes

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 12.—Baseball has wrapped up another wartime World Series and in some respects it might be a good idea to leave it right there under cover.

The truth is that the fortieth classic of the diamond, as it is sometimes called, was not a memorable World Series.

It drew larger crowds than last year's record attendance, produced a new high players' pool and provided more than $300,000 for war charities, yet it fell short by the one standard on which it can be measured against previous classics—good baseball performance.

This, perhaps, was to be expected because both the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals were of necessity makeshift ball clubs and had players on the field who would not have been even on the bench in peacetime.

The result was a jittery, jumbled exhibition in which 15 errors were made in five games and the series was decided on breaks rather than on baseball skill. The Yankees deserved to win because they had the championship spirit to take advantage of the openings where they occurred.

Cards Had Best Pitching

Pitching, which decides most series and which was the one reason the Yankees were established in advance as favorites for this classic, was not the deciding factor as it turned out. The hurling for both sides was good, although scarcely spectacular, and, taking an overall view, the Cardinals had the better of it.

But the Red Birds were badly overshadowed in two departments in which they had claimed superiority—fielding and base running. Instead of the Cardinals giving a wild base-running orgy like they staged last year to beat the Yanks, this year it was New York which literally ran over the Cardinals on the bases paths.

There were no great stars in the series and no easily identified goats. Joe Gordon, who had been both in the past—a hero in 1941 and a bust in 1942—regained his place of eminence among second basemen and set a new series fielding record. Frank Crosetti was more outstanding, not exactly a star but more precisely a pest. He was mixed up in more important plays during the five games than any other player.

Bill Johnson was the leading

Ed Barrow, Yankee Head, Is Very Ill

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 12.—There will be no hilarious homecoming for the victorious New York Yankees tonight. Edward G. Barrow, 75-year-old president of the Yankees, was declared by New Rochelle hospital authorities today to be still critically ill, following an attack of heart disease.

Dr. A. F. Heyl, who is treating Mr. Barrow, announced his patient is in a critical condition, but "doing as well as could be expected."

The Yankee president was ordered to bed by his physician when the strain on his heart became apparent after attending the opening game of the World Series on Tuesday. On Friday, when his condition did not improve, it was necessary to remove him to the hospital.

Barrow was not permitted to listen to the radio play-by-play account of the final game, which his club won, but received accounts of the contest after each inning.

His collapse last week climaxed several weeks of poor health. The hard-working executive, who has been in the game since 1895, when he managed an amateur team in Des Moines, insisted on tackling the work involved in handling the reservatoins for the opening series games in New York. Although he knew his health was failing, he evinced a determination to witness the series, and told sports writers the Yankees would "kick the Cardinals' brains out."

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 12 (AP).—Occupy, leading money winner among 2-year-olds, and his brother, Occupation, are headed for Louisville to compete during the fall meeting at Churchill Downs and the 6-day war fund racing program to precede it, starting next Saturday.

Churchill Track Superintendent Tom Young said today that approximately 800 horses would be on hand for the war fund program and the 13-day meeting to follow.

Dutch Bergman Encouraged by Scout Report on Green Bay

Lapka Slated To Play End For Redskins

Errors by Lions Helped Green Bay Roll Up Score, Report Indicates

Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman was encouraged by a scout report from Vince McNally yesterday that it was not so much Green Bay power but Detroit Lion lapses which helped the Packers to a 35-14 victory last Sunday. The Redskins meet the Packers Sunday in Milwaukee.

McNally, now a member of Georgetown University's staff of physical instructors, handled all the Villanova scouting for Clipper Smith when McNelly was assistant coach of the Wildcaps and Bergman pressed him into service Sunday when Dr. Clarence Spears, the Maryland coach, could not make connections after the Old Liners' Saturday game.

The Lions played their worst game of the season and in trying a new defensive setup against the Packers they succeeded in botching the job and Green Bay had a comparatively easy time running up five touchdowns and holding the Lions to one until the final minutes to play. Gus Dorais was at a loss to explain the Lions' letdown as Green Bay used mostly straight football and played Don Hutson only a few minutes in scoring their second victory.

They Played Touch!

In a two-hour workout last evening at Griffith Stadium, Bergman had Joe Aquirre pose at Hutson in running Green Bay plays. On the less serious side of the practice the line played against the backs in a game of touch football to work out the Sunday kinks, and everybody was so enthused it was almost dark before they took to the showers.

Ted Lapka, the rookie end from St. Ambrose who came to the Redskins via the Chicago Cardinals probably will start at end for the Redskins in place of Bob Masterson, whose sprained ankle probably will keep him out of the Packer game.

Bob Seymour, who suffered a bruised rib Sunday against the Brooklyn Dodgers, went through the workout at full speed. Willie Wilkin was in uniform, but he favored his injured leg and he is a doubtful player against the Packers, although he will make the trip. Andy Farkas was absent with a cold, and Ken Hayden was in street clothes with a mild ankle sprain and hip bruise, but both expect to work out today. Joe Gibson, laid up with a charley horse, will not be ready for another week or two.

Will Beat the Packers

Bergman, first president of the Touchdown Club, returned in the role of principal speaker yesterday and told a capacity audience he thought the Redskins could beat the Packers Sunday, as in the Baltimore exhibition game loss purely fundamental mistakes were responsible for the 23-21 defeat.

Bergman reviewed the league teams and went over the personnel of the Redskins for the benefit of his fellow club members. With only 14 players from the great club of last year coached by Lieut. Ray Flaherty and Turk Edwards, Bergman said he would make no promises but promised an interesting season, and if he had his way a championship season.

A war bond for the outstanding Redskin player of Sunday's game went to Wilbur Moore. Central's Gerald Smith was honored as the outstanding scholastic player of the week.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIBBY JOCK, $21.40, $6.30, $4.90; GULLAH, $3.00, $2.60; BRAINS AFIRE, $16.80.

NIBBY JOCK lacked early speed, improved position to stretch, came with bold rush between horses and was opening gap at end. GULLAH was closest to pace of BRAINS AFIRE, disposed of latter when placed to pressure, but could not resist winner. BRAINS AFIRE went to front immediately after break, set good pace, but tired in final 70 yards.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 12:37. Off at 12:39½. Winner, B. F. Christmas' b. g. (6), by Grand Time—Dunclad. Trained by B. F. Christmas. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13⅘.

†Mrs. D. C. Winkleman and H. L. Straus entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERE GOES, $7.40, $3.80, $3.40; ROUGH TIME, $4.30, $3.60; POST HASTE, $7.60.

HERE GOES, within striking distance from start, responded when shaken up and disposed of ROUGH TIME and was kept to pressure to end. ROUGH TIME raced on outside and forwardly, was hard used running with AMAZED and hung in closing drive. POST HASTE was off poorly and improved position gradually to show good effort.

Daily Double, NIBBY JOCK and HERE GOES, Paid $91.80.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:06. Off at 1:06. Winner, Mrs. C. A. Lyon's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWEEPING LEE, $11.30, $5.70, $3.70; POGOSO, $4.10, $2.80; LITTLE BUD, $4.10.

SWEEPING LEE was in close quarters early, came out for racing room entering stretch, responded vigorously when placed to hard drive, ducked between horses and won in final strides. POGOSO was well placed from start, came through on inside to take command and barely failed to last. LITTLE BUD set and forced early pace while hustled and weakened in final stages.

FOURTH RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1300; claiming; steeplechase. (15 jumps.) For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 1:35. Off at 1:35½. Winner, Mrs. Henry S. Horkheimer's blk. g. (9), by Grand Ace—Eileen W. Trained by J. Bosley, Jr. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:00⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OSSABAW, $8.80, $5.10, $3.50; WEST HADDON, $6.40, $5.00; ST. PATRICK'S DAY, $4.10.

OSSABAW, under restraint while closest to pace of ROLLO, took command when latter weakened, was held together when WEST HADDON went to front, came willingly in final drive and was racing handily at end. WEST HADDON was well placed from start, went to front boldly leaving fourteenth fence, but was no match for winner. ST. PATRICK'S DAY saved ground and closed willingly.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1500; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:06½. Off at 2:07½. Winner, M. Marmorstein's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHUT OUT (entry), $4.60, $2.40, $2.20; WITH REGARDS, $2.60, $2.30; SON OF PEACE, $2.50.

SHUT OUT was not hurried in early stages, improved position gradually when placed to drive, came to inside and came through boldly to take command and held on willingly. WITH REGARDS, first away, opened long lead and weakened gradually under pressure through stretch. SON OF PEACE could not keep up early, lost much ground while making move and closed with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2000; allowances. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:11½. Off at 3:12. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's b. f. Sharkey Again Meets Luttrell On Arena Card

Headline roles will be taken over again tonight by Babe Sharkey, the Texas Man Mountain, and Cowboy Luttrell, the wild bull, at Turner's Arena. Although featured, Luttrell and Sharkey will be two of the 10 grapplers the fans in attendance will consider as an opponent, possibly the following week, for National Wrestling Association Champion Yvon Robert.

Under a new arrangement, Promoter Joe Turner tonight will allow his public to ballot for the people's choice—the best grappler on the card.

Maurice LaChappelle, who has a big Arena following, will pit his skill and cunning against Sino Serlo, a newcomer, in the semiwindup, which may prove to be the show stealer.

Michele Leone, the Boston villain, will bid for the Robert shot in his special 30-minute scrap with Bill Darnell of Pittsburgh.

The Blue Streak, masked grappler, will oppose Tom George, the Greek veteran, while John Melas, the Florida boy, and George Corby of St. Louis will open the proceedings at 8:45.

The Luttrell-Sharkey embroglio is no ordinary meeting, for it involves two of the top villians in the country. Some weeks ago Luttrell's wild man tactics cost him the bout via disqualification. Last week he all but had Sharkey pinned when the Babe hauled off with a right to the jaw and a body press to finish off the Cowboy.

Mrs. Bullock Wins Kenwood Officers' Play

Mrs. J. H. Bullock won the District Women's Golf Association's annual President's Plate tournament yesterday at Kenwood Club, the annual event for officers and past presidents which brought an end to a highly successful competitive season.

Mrs. Bullock, of the host club, posted a gross 95 and minus 14 handicap strokes her net 81 stood up over a field of 27 players. Low gross went to Mrs. T. O. Brandon, Columbia, with an 89.

Mrs. Frank Mirth, the association's prize chairman from Indian Spring, was second with 96—14, 82, while other low net scores were turned in by Mrs. W. E. Hall, Columbia, 95—12, 83; Mrs. C. B. Hartman, Indian Spring, 99—16, 83; Mrs.

Old Tricks Still Good

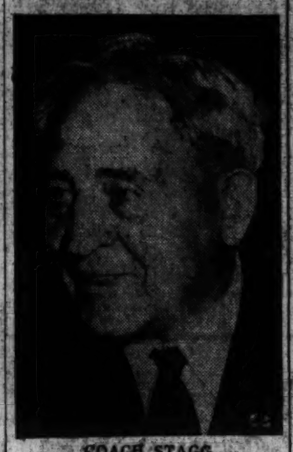
'Retired' Coach Amos Stagg Has Boys on Coast Guessing

71-Year-Old Strategist Produces Winning Team at Little College of Pacific This Season

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 12.—Ten years ago chunky little Amos Alonzo Stagg kicked over the traces and decided that life for him as a football coach would begin at 71.

This season, a decade later, the oldest and most famed gridiron strategist of them all is confusing the opposition with one of his best teams. His College of the Pacific eleven is a toast of the coast, unbeaten four-game winner with the hides of some big ones tacked up in the trophy room.



COACH STAGG

The University of Chicago, under its 70-years-of-age rule, retired Mr. Stagg as football coach and athletic director, reluctantly, of course, in 1932.

"I fooled them though," Mr. Stagg chuckled today. "Chicago's calendar year starts on July 1 and my 71st birthday wasn't until August so I got in an extra year of coaching."

He Has a Lifetime Job

Little College of the Pacific, unknown athletically outside its own sphere, offered Stagg a lifetime coaching berth and the man who had already passed three score and 10 years drove his own auto out West in something like three days. He couldn't get on the job quick enough.

Stagg put Pacific on the sports map and today in his eleventh season and his 54th year of coaching he directs a team that already has beaten St. Mary's Navy Preflight, the University of California at Los Angeles, and the University of California, in addition to the less strong Alameda Coast Guard.

How has he done it? With a batch of good material, for a change, and his own style of play—the "Stagg system," if you please. He copies from no other coach. The Navy trainee program transferred some outstanding backfield talent, mostly former St. Mary's College players, headed by Pass Thrower John Podesto, to Pacific. Some corking good linemen showed up also.

Turns Out a Smart Squad

With less than an hour daily, five days a week, to train, Stagg has put together a fast-breaking, hard-hitting unit that has made the most of his coaching. The flanker he conceived at Chicago in 1918 is a vital part of the system. An end is out there, too, to make it more complicated. He lines three backs up in tandem. An unbalanced line spreads, and splits. Incidentally, he first used the tandem backs early in the century. Some of the oldest stuff, freshened up, is fooling the other side.

Recent Series Not Up to Par

hitter with six safeties, including a triple that broke open the third ball game. Bill Dickey's catching was masterful as always and his homer accounted for yesterday's 2 to 0 triumph in the final game. The one unquestionably fine pitching performance was given by Lefty Marius Russo in winning on Sunday.

The Cardinals' collapse was general, but one of the biggest busts certainly was Lou Klein, who batted .285 and knocked in 63 runs in the regular season, but who had an average of .136 at bat in the series. In five games he left 13 runners stranded on the bases, twice making the final out in an inning with the sacks loaded.

The one member of the series cast who gained new luster was Manager Joe McCarthy, the 56-year-old manager of the Yankees. It was his seventh world championship in nine trips to the series, and his strategy from start to finish was faultless.

Brubaker Out For Grid War At Maryland

Pretty grim business for a youngster of 22.

But it wasn't all war in Iceland. He played end on one of the two Army teams which introduced football there a couple of years ago. Once they had a practice interrupted by the appearance of an enemy reconnaissance plane. In grid uniforms, they manned their guns, chased away the raider, and laughingly resumed practice.

That's the kind of stuff our boys are made of. But they were sort of mad, at that, because they only drove off the enemy and didn't bring him down.

Always Played Football

From Iceland to Greenland to England to Australia he led his machine gunners, taking with them their football togs and playing whenever they got a chance. Finally, in Australia, he was mustered out of the Army for physical disability—although to look at him you wonder why.

He brought his football togs to Maryland and reported to "Doc" Spears. He hasn't seen any action with the Old Liners yet because he hasn't learned the plays but Spears believes he will be a help when he gets in shape and ecomes acclimated. Spears likes those 205 pounds of power on his frame, too.

But what enemy planes, machine-gun bullets and bombs couldn't do, trying for a place on Maryland's grid team has done.

Afraid First Time

He's afraid he won't make the grade!

Vary simply this reticent young hero puts it:

"With Ralph Fico, Ed Hurson and Pat McCarthy going great guns at end (and they are) I'm afraid I won't be able to measure up to their ability."

Imagine a guy who's machine gun has brought down at least five, and maybe more, enemy planes being afraid of a little thing like that.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Now that the tumult over the Senate's secret session has partially abated, Senate leaders are carefully evaluating the report which their globe-circling colleagues brought back.

Here are the main points which have stood out after the first jolt of the report subsided.

1. The five Senators were not called in by the President or the State Department for consultation after they returned. Despite the fact that cooperation with the Senators is all-important, and despite the fact that these Senators had first-hand knowledge, no one in the executive branch of the Government asked them about it.

2. State Department policy has been so generous with the British (some Senators feel it was Churchillian influence over F. D. R.) that American public opinion is likely to feel that the British have put us on the little end of the Allied horn.

Such a reversion of public opinion, it is believed by the majority of Senate leaders, would be tragic in the extreme, since the backbone of United States policy must be cooperation with Britain. However, unless the State Department and the White House tighten their policy, American public opinion is bound to become anti-British. As one Senator expressed it, "There is nothing the American people resent more than being taken for suckers."

Land-Grabbing

3. The five globe-trotters brought back a picture of national grabbing for territory and bases which more than ever convinced saner senatorial heads that the only solution for world peace is collective security.

"If the Big Three—Russia, United States and Britain—now begin grabbing among themselves," remarked one Senator, "we might just as well get ready for the next war right away. Never were three nations stronger and better equipped to grab. The only alternative is for these three giants to work out their future by cooperation and collective security."

4. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts emerged not only as the "chief villain" of the drama but the man who is already planning to play the role of his famous grandfather in knifing any collective security pact after the war.

This was the conclusion not only of Democrats but Republicans, some of them New England neighbors of Lodge. Both sides were boiling mad. His only defenders were Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky and Senator Hiram Johnson of California, an old friend of Lodge's grandfather who helped him lead the fight against the League of Nations.

In Grandfather's Footsteps

MANY YEARS ago young Henry Cabot Lodge confided to close friends that it was his ambition to follow in the steps of his isolationist grandfather. To this end he came to Washington as a newsman, specialized in covering Capitol Hill where he could get acquainted with the Senate. Then after serving in the Massachusetts Legislature he was finally elected to the United States Senate.

Considered by his colleagues smarter than his grandfather, young Lodge last week cleverly laid the seeds for isolationist imperialism during his speech at the secret session. What especially angered his colleagues was his statement that Americans would suffer a million casualties if Russia withheld air bases in Siberia.

What MacArthur Said

Senator Russell of Georgia, chairman of the special world inspection committee, had already told other Senators that he was at the same dinner table when General MacArthur made a statement to Senator Lodge regarding these Siberian bases. However, according to Senator Russell, MacArthur did not say that a million American lives would be lost because of failure to get these bases, but "several thousand." Also, according to Senator Russell, MacArthur qualified his statement by adding "if we could hold them."

There has been grave doubt in the minds of U. S. military men as to whether or not any Siberian bases could be held very long in view of Japan's proximity. Only a few miles from Japan, yet 5000 from the United States and 3000 miles from Moscow, it is considered doubtful if they could be held for more than a few weeks.

This fact was brought out on the Senate floor by Senator Brewster of Maine in the hot senatorial debate which followed. All the critical Senators could do, however, was to gesture to Lodge's empty seat, for he had ducked out the day before.

NOTE: One side issue which rolled the Senators was the discovery that Lodge had sold the magazine rights to his story of the battle-front tour to a prominent weekly publication. Thus, despite the secret session, Lodge will now rush into print.

Globe-Trotting Chaff

THERE HAS BEEN a noticeable improvement in Jap Zero planes, the Senators reported. They are faster, more maneuverable and the pilots better protected by armor. However, the efficiency of Jap pilots has declined. . . . In India part of the British troops are kept busy keeping northern tribes in order rather than fighting the Japs. . . . Starvation is so bad in India that in one section, the Senators said, bodies are taken out at the rate of about 25 a day, piled in a heap and burned. . . . Chiang Kai-shek is having trouble keeping some of his war loards in line. "Silver bullets" aimed by the Japs are alienating them. . . . Army Engineers of the Navy's Seabees have been doing a great job. . . . British diplomats seem to know the score on what policy their government will follow for five years in advance. United States diplomats don't know the score for more than six months in advance. In fact, United States diplomats frequently play "follow the leader" with the British.

Senate Passes Navy Women's Benefit Measure

By the Associated Press

Deleting a provision which would have permitted WAVES to serve overseas, the Senate yesterday passed and returned to the House legislation entitling members of the women's reserve of the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps to the same allowances and benefits as male personnel.

The bill also raises the highest permissable rank of the WAVES' commanding officer from lieutenant commander to captain, and provides that women doctors commissioned in the Navy shall be restricted to shore duty within the continental United States.

Church Won't Accept Pastor's Resignation

Winchester, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—The Rev. Carl A. Honeycutt, who recently resigned as pastor of the historic Grace Lutheran Church to accept a call extended by the Zion Lutheran Church of Sunbury, Pa., has been requested by a unanimous vote of the local congregation to reconsider and continue his work here as pastor.

In a resolution drawn by the members, it was stated that "his going will be a loss to Grace Church and the Lutheran Synod of Virginia."

The minister said today he had not reached a definite conclusion.

W. T. Pond Rites Today; Suffolk Peanut Magnate

Suffolk, Va., Oct. 12 (AP).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Wayland Thomas Pond, sr., 68, Suffolk businessman, who died yesterday after a long illness.

Pond, founder of Pond Brothers Peanut Co., Inc., and the Producers Peanut Co., both of Suffolk, and of a peanut company at Cordele, Ga., was prominent in business, civic and religious activities here.

Hancock, Md., Oct. 12.—Miss Elsie M. Munson, 71, fell dead as she stepped from an automobile which had brought her to the home of her brother, John R. Munson, whose wife, Mrs. Sophia Munson, had succumbed a few hours earlier.

Tire Dealers Urged to Push Conservation

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 12.—A representative of the National Rubber Director's Office said today that if rubber conservation methods are successful "it is a good bet the most critical period will have passed at the end of the next six months."

Addressing the annual conference of the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, George Beardshaw told delegates, however, they must make tire consumers fully aware that "the crisis is still with us."

"Unless that is done," he asserted, "many trucks and cars will soon be out of service."

Beardshaw said that while production of synthetic production is increasing, the task of keeping essential transportation rolling will call for a greater amount of ingenuity and skill.

and skill.

The association elected Robert A. Dean of Louisville, Ky., president, to succeed Ira S. Shull of Los Angeles. Ray Grimshaw of Portland, Oreg., was chosen to succeed Dean as vice president, and David Lehman of Washington was named secretary.

The dealers adopted a 12-point program designated to increase cooperation and improve the industry's merchandising procedure. Among other things, the program calls for a study of the merits of cooperative buying and an inquiry into the possibility of an equitable minimum price on tires and tubes.

Markets Are Closed For Columbus Day

All securities and commodity markets except livestock were closed yesterday along with banks in 34 States in observance of Columbus Day. Washington banks were open, but the Washington Stock Exchange observed the holiday.

C. & O. Sets Date For Distribution On Common Stock

Cleveland, Oct. 12 (AP).—Looking toward a possible merger eventually with its various subsidiaries, directors of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway have authorized a distribution of $10 par value of preference stock for each share of common, describing the step as a "capital readjustment" rather than as "dividend income."

The distribution will be made on December 1 to stock of record November 1, if the Interstate Commerce Commission approves the transaction.

"It is believed this readjustment should make possible an exchange of securities between the Chesapeake & Ohio and its controlled companies on a more equitable basis in the event that the directors may decide that such an exchange would be advantageous to the companies," the board's statement said. "This is subject, of course, to the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"This is a subject which presents great difficulties and has been under consideration for a long period of time without tangible results. It is not to be implied that such an exchange of securities is imminent." The Chesapeake's present subsidiaries are the Nickel Plate, Pere Marquette and Wheeling & Lake Erie.

Blue Network Sale Approved

By the Associated Press

Sale of the Blue Network, owned by the Radio Corp of America, to Edward J. Noble, former Undersecretary of Commerce, was approved yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission. Amount involved is eight million dollars. Noble has organized a new company, American Broadcasting System, Inc.

Southern Railway Unit Files New Bond Issue

The Atlanta and Charlotte Air Line Railway Co., operated by the Southern Railway, yesterday filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) a plan for meeting 20 million dollars in obligations maturing next July 1.

The company proposes to issue and sell 15 million dollars of 20-year first mortgage bonds. The Southern would advance 5 million dollars and receive an equal amount of 20-year second mortgage bonds.

Interest rates on the new securities have not yet been fixed. Of the old bonds $5,500,000 bear interest of 4½ per cent and the remaining $14,500,000 5 per cent.

Dream of 400-Passenger Plane Ridiculed by Airline Head

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 12.—Commercial airliners of the immediate post-war period will be the planes already developed, President C. Bedell Monro of the Pennsylvania-Central Airlines declared today.

Asserting "too many aviation crystal-gazers" were prophesying super-colossal planes and international traffic, the Washington executive said that because producers are preoccupied with output for war "we know there will be nothing new for four to six years after the war."

"There are four types of planes available for commercial use," he continued in a speech prepared for delivery before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce. "The first is the familiar workhorse of the airlines and the armed services, known in commercial use as the DC-3 and by the Army as C-47.

Using Obsolete Planes

"These actually are obsolete and, had it not been for the war, would have long since been replaced in most airline use. Approximately 250 were in use before the war and about 150 are now being used in domestic service.

"A second is the Curtiss Commando, known in the Army as the C-46. This plane is capable of carrying twice the 25,500-pound gross load of the DC-3. A third is the Douglas DC-4, a four-engined plane with a 66,000-pound gross load, while the fourth is the Lockheed Constellation with its 82,000-pound gross load. These are the planes of the immediate tomorrow."

Passenger Load Small

Discussing limitations of these ships in Transatlantic aviation, he said the DC-3, the C-46 and the DC-4 peacetime determinative factors could carry "neither passengers nor cargo" over a 3460-mile great circle route, while the constellation could carry five or six passengers an dthe "tremendous pay load of 330 pounds."

Over a 3708-mile route, having "sea stations" 800 miles apart, the DC-3 could carry 10 passengers and 575 pounds of cargo; the C-46, 35 passengers and a ton of cargo; the DC-4, 42 passengers and 6450 pounds of cargo, and the Constellation 55 passengers and 5 tons of cargo, on the basis of a 25 per cent reserve gasoline supply, he added.

"As for 400-passenger planes don't hold your breath or advise your sons or daughters to do so either," Monro said. "They are a long way in the future."

Florida Orange Crop Expected To Set Record

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 12 (AP).—Florida will produce another record-breaking crop of oranges during the 1943-'44 harvesting season, but there will be less grapefruit than last year although more than in 1941-42, according to the first estimate of the new citrus crop just released by the Federal Government.

A production of 38,500,000 boxes of oranges is forecast, composed of 21 million boxes of early and mid-season fruits and 17,500,000 boxes of Valencias, which begin to go to market in the spring.

The grapefruit estimate is 24,500,000 boxes, compared with actual production last season of 27,300,000. There will be 11 million boxes of seedless grapefruit, and 13,500,000 boxes of seeded fruit.

FDA Awaits Bids On Released Eggs

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—A spokesman for the regional Food Distribution Administration said today no bids have been received from dealers for 17,000 cases of eggs released Friday for civilian consumption in nine Northeastern States.

The spokesman, expressing belief dealers were waiting as long as possible before the Thursday closing for bids, added:

"This is a normal situation, as the trade will naturally not jump in to bid before getting the reaction of the egg market to the revocation of food distribution order 40 taking the Government out of the egg market."

The eggs now are held at warehouses in New York, Buffalo, Jersey City, Newark, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Scranton, Pa.

Insurance Agents' Group Elects Heads

Pittsburgh, Oct. 12 (AP).—Fred A. Moreton of Salt Lake City today was elected president of the National Association of Isurance Agents.

Other officers: W. Ray Thomas of Pittsburgh, vice president; Judge B. Miller, New York City, secretary, and George Sairleigh, New York, treasurer.

Gen. Electric Orders Taper Off in Period

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 12.—General Electric Co. announced today orders received in the first nine months of 1943 amounted to $1,199,904,000, a decrease of 10 per cent compared with the total of $1,399,449,000 in the first nine months of 1942.

Orders received in the third quarter totaled $258,375,000, a decline of 45 per cent from $474,077,000 in the same quarter a year ago. The second quarter aggregate of $519,482,000 represented a decrease of 8 per cent from $566,252,000 in the like period of 1942 and first quarter orders of $422,047,000 increased 41 per cent over $299,120,000 in the similar period of 1942.

Bulk of U. S. Steel Expansion Completed

New York, Oct. 12 (AP).—United States Steel Corp. Chairman Irving S. Olds said today the greater part of the corporation's war expansion program has been completed and placed in operation while the remainder will go into production soon.

He said work on the largest of the undertakings—the new Geneva plant in Utah—is near completion with a contract for wartime operation placed by the Government with Geneva Steel Co., newly-formed subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

Writing in the October edition of U. S. Steel News, Olds said:

"The production record of American business during the past two or three years should be a complete answer to those critics, or advocates of a new economic order, who not so long ago advanced the notion that our industrial system is moribund and incapable of meeting the needs of the Nation.

"As events have amply demonstrated, private industry is a very live and potent force, which today is making a mighty contribution to the country's war effort."

WE MUST ACT TO PRESERVE IT!

LIKE a leaf floating downstream, we are being carried along toward a new and uncharted economy. What this new economy will be like will depend, to no small extent, upon what industry does or fails to do during the coming months. Time is short; in fact, we may suddenly find ourselves standing on the threshold of a peace economy with our war boots still on our feet.

● While bending every effort to win the war, we cannot afford to be caught unprepared for the peace. As Prime Minister Churchill said at Harvard, we are "bound, so far as life and strength allow and without prejudice to our dominating military task, to look ahead to those days which will surely come, when we shall have finally beaten down Satan under our feet and find ourselves with other great Allies at once the masters and the servants of the future." Unless we do look ahead, there is danger that we may become neither the masters nor the servants, but merely the victims, of the future.

● The war has quickened our ailing economy and opened our eyes again to the possibilities of peace-time plenty. But it has also brought great dislocations of labor and capital; it has led to abnormal patterns in prices and income distribution; and it has created inflationary pressures with enormous potential powers to injure or to help us in the transition from war to peace.

● The pattern of life in postwar America will be just what we make it. All of us will have a hand in shaping that pattern, but business men will have a special responsibility in the reconstruction. As employers of labor and capital and as enterprisers assuming the risks of new ventures, they will have to plan and carry out the conversion from war work to full peace-time production. Because of their key role, business men have a special opportunity to discover, and to help others to understand, the conditions which are necessary if they are to do their job satisfactorily.

● This is a narrow view of postwar problems but it is a central view, because no one condition is more vital to the health of the world than a high level of production and employment in the United States. We cannot hope to lead the world out of economic chaos if we fail to put our own house in order. If we fail to adjust our domestic economy, we may destroy Adolf Hitler; but we will not destroy the germ that breeds "Hitlers." If we do not maintain the production necessary for supporting a large volume of imports and exports, then the plans for international monetary stabilization, for good relations with our neighbors, for rehabilitation of stricken countries, and for strengthening the democratic bulwarks against dictatorship are all likely to come to grief. We must demonstrate our capacity for world leadership, or be content to follow the leadership of others.

● The prospects for achieving a sound and vigorous economy in the United States are not so good as to warrant complacency on the part of men genuinely interested in free enterprise and the political freedoms incident to it. We have yet to find means to utilize our vast and abundant resources for the good of all. We have yet to learn how to keep men from the terrible experience of unemployment and the fear of want which makes them willing to sacrifice freedom and opportunity for almost any promise of security. We have yet to reconcile the conflicting interests of labor, agriculture, and business so that they can work together effectively. We have yet to learn how to check the fever of inflation and cure the palsy of depression.

● When we were attacked at Pearl Harbor, we realized our physical peril immediately and united in a tremendous common effort against the enemy. The onset of economic perils is less obvious. No bombs will signal the deterioration of the private enterprise system, the extension of regimentation, the further control of business by government, and the concentration of political power in less and less responsible hands. If these things should befall us, they will come insidiously while we are preoccupied with self interests and oriented by popular misconceptions. If the freedoms of the individual shrivel as the state grows in power, it will be because the individual is too indifferent or complacent to concern himself seriously with economic problems. If our people are misled by false prophets and demagogues, it will be because business men did not understand economics, because scholars were too ignorant of practical affairs, and because we failed to produce economic statesmen of sufficient stature for the task in hand.

● Thinking is hard work. Thinking about things outside our personal experience, about economic processes that are broader and in some fundamental respects different from buying and selling or running a business—is strenuous mental labor. Thinking straight about problems that are beyond our personal and immediate status and our pocketbooks, thinking about problems that involve nation-wide production, nation-wide employment and nation-wide buying power—in other words the operation of our entire economic system—involves real self-discipline. Yet there is no other way to safeguard our freedoms. We cannot rely on trial and error; tinkering takes too long; social experiments which turn out wrong can be undone only at great cost—if at all. If we proceed blindly, we shall flounder into an economic and political morass from which we cannot escape.

● We floundered badly all through the Thirties, until the war lifted us temporarily to for the individual man and woman. It is not shall be back floundering worse than ever unless we find a solid road along which to proceed.

● America has grown rich and strong under a system of political and economic freedom. Opportunity and the necessity of self-reliance have brought forth great accomplishments. The hope of profit and the spur of competition have urged men on to find new and better products, new and better methods, and to risk their savings in pioneer investment. Never has a country achieved so high a standard of living and afforded so large an opportunity for the individual man and woman. It is not surprising that some distinguished business leaders, looking back over their own experience, tell us that everything will be all right if only there is "less government in business."

● I wish the solution were as simple as that. However this is only part of the answer. It is becoming increasingly clear that industrial capitalism as we know it contains within itself certain fundamental weaknesses which can lead to its destruction if they are not counteracted. No democracy can survive when twenty to thirty per cent of its workers cannot get jobs. That happened here in the Thirties. For years on end, despite fumbling efforts at recovery, one out of every five workers was denied a chance to earn a living in private business. We shall never again have such mass unemployment as occurred in the bottom of the Depression, because the government will take it upon itself to create jobs if business cannot offer them. Whenever that happens, however, the area of private enterprise will be reduced and that of government will be expanded—and the concentration of political power will be increased. This is the challenge we business men face today, and ours is the first opportunity at finding the solution.

● The crux of our economic problem is unemployment. Unless there are jobs for ninety to ninety-five per cent of those who are able and willing to work, there will be widespread fear and lack of opportunity, which will drive labor unions, agricultural groups, and business interests to take self-protective measures. Such measures are certain to restrict production, stifle progress, and imperil our democratic way of life. Not all our problems will automatically be solved if we learn how to avoid mass unemployment, but they will at least then have a good chance of solution.

● And so American business men face a great responsibility! We will have to find the answer to a great many momentous questions. We will have to delve into problems that cannot be solved by precedent.

● Looking backward to these times, future historians are likely to say that here we Americans stood at the crossroads and, consciously or not, made our choice between a system of private enterprise and personal freedom and a system of collectivism and regimentation.

● It is particularly appropriate, therefore, as the problems of our time take shape and as events rearrange their order and importance, to appraise the steps we are taking and point the way we are going. It is my plan to present such analyses from time to time to the readers of this newspaper, as well as to the one-and-a-half million readers of McGraw-Hill publications.

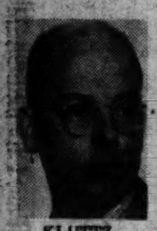
Byrnes Investigating Senators' War Charges

It's being done on the q. t., but the Administration is conducting its own investigation of the charges made by the five globe-flying Senators. Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes is making the inquiry. Both Lend-Lease and the Office of War Information are known to have been called on by Byrnes' office for an explanation of the Senators' bill of particulars. Moreover, it's reported the Byrnes inquiry will cover charges made against the Army and the Navy, except those having to do with military strategy. When Congress gets around to investigate, the Administration wants to have the answers ready.



KLUTTZ

(The President yesterday cited figures which indicated that part of this investigation already had been made—Editor's note.)

Paul O'Leary, who resigned as deputy director for rationing at the Office of Price Administration, has joined his old boss, Leon Henderson, at the Research Institute of America. Leon has put him in charge of the Washington office. O'Leary was supposed to have gone back to Cornell . . . Bob Lynch, the Lend Lease executive assistant, has joined the staff of State Undersecretary Stettinius . . . The Navy can't make up its mind what to call its girls in uniform. Pictures from the department's Bureau of Public Relations refer to the girls as WAVES. But news stories are more formal, they call the girls either Navy women or members of the Women's Naval Reserve.

For a prize example of how not to run a Federal agency I suggest the Smaller War Plants Corporation. And within this agency is plenty of ammunition for the opponents of big government. From responsible officials and employes alike I've been told that (1) employes sit around with little or nothing to do, (2) no one at the top can make up his mind what should be done; expensive projects are started and eliminated before they are finished; (3) morale is at a new low and it can't sink much further. No one knows what's going to happen to the agency and what it will be able to do even if it's given new blood.

Here's a Federal agency responsible to no one except the President and obviously the President is too busy to straighten out its many troubles. And here's a Federal agency, remember, that was created by Congress on its own motion. Technically, SWPC was placed under the War Production Board, but when its bosses fought for the appointment of people whose Federal Bureau of Investigation records made interesting reading among other things, the agency was cut adrift and allowed to row its own canoe. The agency balked at being subjected to all the many rules and regulations that all other Federal bureaus must live under. The objective—getting war contracts to the little guy—is excellent, but the place has never been organized so it could accomplish that. The agency is in a suspended state now and has been since the resignation of Brig. Gen. Robert Johnson, the chairman.

A U. S. Marshal's office had a war bond quota of $600. The marshal put his office over by plenty when he purchased $52,000 worth of bonds. . . . Ramspeck Committee investigators hear that the Army-Navy Electronics Production unit is being disbanded. The committee is investigating a charge that a former employe routed a juicy contract to his business firm. . . . The last union group will be heard today by the Treasury wage board on demands for wage increases for the thousands of per diem employes at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. If the board grants an increase it'll have to be okayed by the War Labor Board before it can be made effective. . . . Sign on Navy bulletin board: Found. One G. I. black shoe. Owner can claim it by producing mate.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has asked Congress to relieve the part-time charwomen at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from repaying the Government an overpayment in salaries. His request has been referred to the House Committee on Claims and it will unquestionably take favorable action. The bureau made a mistake and overpaid the charwomen for a number of months. The Comptroller General ruled that the overpayment must be returned. Overtime pay was withheld from some of the charwomen who were among the lowest-paid people in the Federal service. However, the Secretary relented and has ordered full payments to the cleaners while Congress considers his request.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has one of the very best records, in or out of Government, on absenteeism. From May during August, a period when absenteeism was running 5 to 15 per cent in war plants, the vast FBI organization rolled up an absenteeism record of 2.8 per cent. In private war industries the absolute minimum is believed to be around 4.5 per cent. . . . The Navy has sent to the House Naval Affairs Committee a full report on each person commissioned from civilian life since July 30. The report, which is confidential, will be studied by the Lyndon Johnson subcommittee.

Narrow Escape

Litchfield, Conn.—A sturdy goshawk, crashing through a window at the Litchfield Historical Society, eyed his long-dead and stuffed brethren with fear and trembling and then scrambled through the hole it had made, apparently unwilling to become a museum piece.

Prisoners' Pride

San Quentin, Calif.—As a reward for subscribing $100,297 in war bonds, 10 times their goal, San Quentin prisoners will be allowed to name a bomber. High in popularity are "Bars and Stripes," "Rock Buster," "Duffy Tavern and "Yegg Layer." The current favorite is "Bad Check"—which always returns.

Playground Fund Switch Is Opposed

Recreation Board Insists It Retain Power to Decide On Improvements

The Recreation Board yesterday went on record as opposing any move to take from it power to decide what local play areas need improving or maintenance care.

It disapproved a suggestion by National Capital Parks that congressional appropriations for such work be made directly to the parks office, on whose lands the play areas are located.

The board recommended that the money be appropriated as in the past, to the board, with the parks doing the work on a contract basis.

N. Simplification Seen

To simplify accounting procedures, the board had investigated possibility of having the funds appropriated to Parks with the understanding that the board have the privilege of directing the spending. It was learned, however, that accounting procedures would not be simplified in this way.

The board further recommended resurfacing of various school playgrounds and heard a plea for more hard-surfaced play courts and indoor facilities for winter activities by Herman Riley, director of Region C.

Embassy Tract Eyed

Riley also recommended investigation of use by the department of a tract of land on S st. adjoining Mitchell Park, 23rd and S sts. nw. The tract, he said, was owned by the German embassy and has now been taken over unofficially by the neighborhood children, victory gardeners and a man with a beehive.

He said additional space was needed there for a ball diamond and other teen age and adult facilities.

The board authorized its officers to act with the Lincoln Civic Association and the Recreation Department administrators on a recommendation to operate Snow's Court, a play area in an alley neighborhood, after school and on Saturdays.

Boys Testify In Favor of Pages' Home

Congressional page boys told a House committee yesterday that living in rooms and boarding houses around Washington was not like being home with mother and father.

They spoke in favor of a measure by Representative Elliott (Democrat) of California to erect a building to house the 46 House and 21 Senate pages under proper supervision.

One of them, Edward Levine of Milwaukee, testified that when he first came to Waashington a room in a basement was all that he could obtain and that he was "ready to pack up my bags again and leave."

"We are all on our own and need a mother's and father's advice here," Levine said, adding that he has seen some pages "begin to smoke and cuss" after they arrive.

Another, Carl Brown of Mayfield, Ky., said he lived in a boarding house with three other pages "but it's not like home."

"Slats" Browning of Seattle said that when he visited his home for the first time after coming here as a page and told of congested living conditions, his mother "decided to come back with him and see that I lived in a proper place and she is now living with me."

Representative Elliott said it was essential that the pages be provided with suitable quarters under proper controls and that possibly $200,000 would be sufficient to erect such quarters.

"The Government has spent up to half a million dollars on a single building on the West Coast to care for relocation of some Japanese for 90 days," Elliott said.

Representative Calvin Johnson (Republican) of Illinois suggested that patronage be done away with as far as pages are concerned and, instead of their being brought to Washington upon appointment by Senators and Representatives, that the pages be appointed from families living in the District of Columbia.

Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio asserted that it was time that Congress "after going along for 150 years without doing anything about this problem should begin to play for a permanent policy."

Chairman Lanham (Democrat) of Texas appointed a subcommittee to study the question including Representatives Abernathy (Democrat) of Mississippi, Outland (Democrat) of California, McGregor (Republican) of Ohio and Elliott and Johnson.

Gearhart Sees Columbus as An Inspiration

Heralding the courage of Columbus as an important inspiration for America during the war years, Representative Gearhart (Republican) of California last night called for a continuing courage on the home front to turn from our midsts those who would ruin us. He spoke before District Knights of Columbus, gathered at the R st. clubhouse to observe the anniversary of the discovery of America by their patron.

He cautioned against going too far with so-called internationalism in such measures as the "loosely woven, ambiguous, uncertain and unintelligent Fulbright resolution."

Representative Gearhart said the resolution committed the Nation to a super-government which might destroy it. See what 25 years can do to friendships, he cautioned.

Advocating an association of free and independent powers to maintain peace implemented with strength, he said Congress should take the counsel of soldiers of experience, the American Legion.

"Peace must be maintained by understanding nations which are in themselves, sound," he said.

He said it is this generation's responsibility to hand down to future ones something worthy of the trust of our fathers, by defending our fathers, by defending our heritage with common sense and reason. "All we have has been won to us and preserved to us by strong people." he concluded.

Greek Envoy Marks Issue Of New Stamp

Ambassador Diamantopoulos last night visited the Thomson Community Center Collector's Club to mark the issuing of a commemorative stamp by the United States for Greece—one of Europe's "downtrodden nations."

He is not the first diplomat to appear in the auditorium of the old midcity school on such an occasion.

The Collectors, through their vice president and program director, W. M. Stuart, have had speakers and stamp lovers from Poland, Luxembougr, Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and France already—as each stamp was issued. Ambassador Fotitch of Yugoslavia and representatives from Albania, Austria and Denmark are yet to attend.

It is a novel group these representatives have met and one whose collections are nationally known and discussed. The club boasts active membership of over 200 and always more than 100 of them are on hand—summer and winter, war or peace—for the Tuesday meetings. Doctors, dentists, generals, privates, able seamen, housewives come to trade and auction and admire the stamps which are brought for display each week by fellow members.

Two of the most outstanding collections of Danish stamps in the United States will be exhibited in December, when the Danish commemorative stamp is issued, according to Stuart.

When Ambassador Loudon of the Netherlands spoke during the summer, he saw seven stamps from his country which he had never seen before—stamps of whose rarity he had known, however.

In fact, rare stamps are no oddity at the Collector's Club, and visitors from all over the country who come to Washington, know of the meeting date through a national stamp magazine, and make a program part of their tour of the city. "Some of the finest in the world, have been shown," said Stuart.

Several years ago, when a block of four "upside down" airmail stamps of 1918 were shown, four Secret Service men were brought to guard them, and several policemen came too. The stamps were valued at $25,000.

Social Hygiene Textbook Report

A report on social hygiene text books in the District schools, was made at a meeting of the District Social Hygiene Society last night by Mrs. P. C. Ellett, president of the District P-TA.

The society also heard a report on the increase in illegitimate births in the District, especially among 'teen age mothers. Another report dealt with the national increase in venereal disease.

Logan-Thomas Favors Teachers' Service Measure

A resolution favoring a Senate bill that would allow teachers to maintain a record of continuous service as teachers if they enlisted in the Armed Services was adopted last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association.

Another resolution favoring the conversion of two-man to one-man cars by the Capital Transit Co. was voted down.

Frank Thompson and Edward Brandstatter were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A talk on the Community War Fund was made by Mrs. Catherine Bugg.

Renewal of Army-Navy Award Granted to Gichner Company

The Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc., which was the first commercial concern in Washington to receive the Army-Navy "E," has been advised by Admiral C. C. Bloch, chairman of the Navy board for production awards, that the company has been granted a renewal of the award for an additional six months and that it is being presented with a new pennant with a star affixed.

The Gichner Iron Works is the first Capital firm to fly a starred "E" pennant. It was announced yesterday that the flag will be run up for the first time at noon today at the company's plant, 1214 24th st. nw.

In a letter to Fred S. Gichner, founder and president of the company, Admiral Bloch stated, "It is with a great deal of pleasure that I inform you this award has been made."

Admiral Bloch declared that "the men and women of the Fred S. Gichner Iron Works Co., Inc., have achieved a signal honor by continuing their splendid production in such volume as to justify this renewal of their award. In the first instance, it was difficult to win the Army-Navy 'E', and by meriting a renewal the management and employes have indicated their solid determination and ability to support our fighting forces by supplying the equipment which is necessary for ultimate victory."

The Gichner firm has produced material for the Army and Navy in three wars, from the Spanish-American conflict to the present.

Camp to Be Inspected

Commanding officers of four women's branches of the armed forces will leave at 8:30 a. m. today by plane from National Airport for a three-day inspection of Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., the training base for women Marines.

Institution Labor Plans Are Studied

Proposals Given At Meeting of Commissioners, Superintendents

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

Major changes in the employment methods and working hours of institutional employes were suggested yesterday at a meeting in the District Building of the Commissioners and the superintendents of public institutions and welfare agencies.

Commissioner Guy Mason, who has administrative jurisdiction over all District institutions, was chairman of the meeting, called to devise means of alleviating the acute shortage of help being experienced by all District institutions. Three separate plans were taken under consideration by the Commissioners:

1. To revise the present Civil Service Commission regulations which make it necessary for all employes to obtain Civil Service certification. The revision would make it possible for the Commissioners to authorize immediately the employment of a person, and would obviate the necessity of waiting weeks for the certification.

2. To increase the present 44-hour work week to a 48-hour week. Under this plan time and one-half would be paid for the extra four hours.

3. To decrease the annual leave of 26 days to 15 days. Inasmuch as the 26 days is allowed by Federal legislation it was not fully explained how this could be accomplished without asking Congress to authorize the proposal for the duration of the war.

War Objectors May Work

Ray L. Huff, director of welfare, told the Commissioners that his attempt to secure Japanese internees as employes had met with some encouragement, although nothing definite had come of it. He added that the possibility of getting conscientious objectors was much brighter, although the Government had given him no definite word on the suggestion.

Col. Joseph D. Arthur, acting Engineer Commissioner, suggested that the department heads "clamp down and don't release employes who wish to resign unless they have extraordinarily good reasons. Certainly a raise in pay or the desire to work for a different agency does not constitute a sufficient cause." He also pointed out that an employe who quit his job, without a release, would have to wait at least 60 days before he could be certified for anothter job.

The present arrangement of having the Civil Service Commission certify employes was adopted in 1931, according to Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, and could be terminated at any time by the desire of either the commission or the District governmnet.

Most of the officials said that merely obtaining employes would not entirely solve the present problems inasmuch as persons being obtained at present were entirely inexperienced and had to undergo a long training period.

The 13 institutions and agencies represented at the meeting were authorized to employ 2961 persons and at the present time were 520 under the needed number.

Those institutions represented were: the Upshur Street Hospital for the Convalescent, Gallinger Hospital, Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatorium, District Workhouse and Lorton Reformatory, Home for the Aged, Industrial Home for Whites, Industrial Home for Colored, National Training School for Girls, District Training School, District Jail, and the Public Assistance and the Children's Divisions of the Welfare Department.

Tablet to Honor Dr. Bratenahl At Cathedral

A memorial tablet to George Carl Fitch Bratenahl, former Dean of Washington Cathedral, will be unveiled at the Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m.

The Right Rev. George W. Davenport, retired, Bishop of Easton, Md., will dedicate the tablet, which is in the Cathedral corridor leading to Bethlehem Chapel, and the Rev Charles T. Warner, Rector of St. Alban's Church will speak.

Dr. Bratenahl, Canon of the Cathedral from 1901-15 and Dean from 1915-38, was recognized as the greatest iconographer of his time. Much of the design and decoration of the Cathedral was of his planning. The late Bishop Freeman termed him the "guiding spirit" in the development of the crypt chapels, the choir, and the reredos.

Reporter's 'Sawmill Sandals' Taken in Stride by 14th Street

Lack of Sensation Indicates She's on A 'Sound' Footing

By Margaret Davis
Post Staff Writer

A girl reporter, faced with prospects of only two pairs of shoes a year, put on a pair of sabots and walked to work yesterday down busy 14th st., virtually unnoticed.

The unheralded early afternoon walk through downtown wartime Washington proved at least one thing—the Government girl, whose daily trips down long marble corridors aggravate her shoe problem, can solve it with wood provided she wants to try it. War Production Board's lumber and lumber production division might have to be consulted if all would be shod in wood.

The shoes the reporter wore yesterday were all wood and a shouting bright red. They clattered as they slipped up and down when she walked to the stop at North Capitol and U sts. Children at play did not pause to stare.

The policeman on the beat calmly looked the other way.

Conductor on a snooty streamliner streetcar surveyed her pass blandly as the reporter clambered aboard.

Reaching her downtown stop, the two long steps from car to street

For one tense moment the rosy-cheeked face of a student rose before her. The steps were made without mishap and the clacking march down crowded 14th was on.

No autos crashed at 14th and F.

One giggle was encountered between F and E.

That was all.

Pedestrians Over 60 Swell Traffic Deaths

While persons, 60 years of age or older, represent less than 10 per cent of the District's population, the same age class accounted for more than 55 per cent of the pedestrians killed in city traffic so far this year, a survey of the fatality records showed yesterday.

Of the 64 persons killed so far, 45 were pedestrians and of the 45 pedestrians 25 belonged to the 60-or-over group. The oldest to be killed in traffic this year was 89; the youngest 2. The average of all 64 victims was 49. The average age of the 45 pedestrians was 55. Only five of the 64 victims were under 21.

"One of our major pedestrian problems has always been elderly persons who apparently are unable to judge distance and the speed of vehicles," Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said.

"We have attempted on many occasions to reach these elderly persons and to warn them of traffic dangers. Our records show conclusively that the very young and especially the very old dominate our annual pedestrian fatality list."

City News in Brief

Two men were charged yesterday with the strong-arm robbery of Lawrence Fundeburk of 210 E st. n., and held under $1500 bond for a preliminary hearing next Tuesday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

The defendants, who pleaded not guilty, are Guy O. Turner, 26 of 819 6th st. nw., and Bernard M. Napoli, 22, of 604 F st. ne. Police said two men took $180 from Fundeburk yesterday morning. The two were arrested three hours later and found to have $177 in their possession.

2 Concerts Postponed

Illness of one of the members of the Budapest String Quartet, has necessitated postponement of the two concerts scheduled for tomorrow and Friday nights in Coolidge Auditorium at the Library of Congress. The Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation announced that the concerts will take place Wednesday evening, October 20, and Tuesday evening, October 26. Tickets obtained at the box office in Ballard's, 1340 G st., can be returned there, with refund of the service charge, if the holders cannot attend on the new dates.

Princetonians to Meet

Frederick Winant, brother of the American Ambassador to London and until recently a State Department representative in the Middle East, will address members of the Princeton Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel at 12:30 p. m. today. Milton W. King, president of the District Bar Association, is secretary of the club.

Reports on Salvage

A total of 350,832 pounds of waste paper has been collected by the D. C. Salvage Committee in the first month of the drive. It was revealed yesterday. Breakdown of the report: Northwest, 175,981; Northeast, 111,338; Southwest, 4021; Southeast, 59,546.

Study of complaints that trucks failed to pick up paper placed for collection revealed that in more than 50 per cent of the cases the paper had not been put outside before 9 a. m. as is necessary to insure collection.

Appeals Court Dismisses OPA, Safeway Case

The United States Emergency Court of Appeals decreed yesterday that it can hear cases against Office of Price Administration rulings only after the protests of complainants have been denied by the price agency.

This was the basis for the dismissal of three complaints brought by the Safeway Stores, Inc., which contended OPA was discriminating against it and illegally forcing the reduction of meat prices by 10 per cent in its stores doing business of more than $250,000 annually. It also charged discrimiantion in the sale of potatoes, onions and soap.

Safeway contends that the OPA must act on complaints within 30 days after filing of the objection or 90 days after issuance of contented regulations. Since OPA did not act on the Safeway complaints in this time, Safeway argued OPA had in effect denied the complaint.

The tribunal said that there is no time limit OPA is under, but suggested that should Safeway make a showing that OPA was unnecessarily tardy in deciding its complaints, the court would issue a writ of mandamus forcing early action.

17 to Represent D. C. on 3-Way Panel of WLB

Seventeen Washingtonians have been named to a tripartite panel of the Regional War Labor Board to hear labor-industry disputes in the city, it was announced yesterday.

They will serve with 300 others previously named in other parts of the region. Names of the members were submitted by the group interested, for instance, industry men submitted the names of the industry members and labor organizations the names of the labor men. Besides labor and industry, there are members named to represent the public.

Representing the public:

Prof. C. A. Briefs, professor of labor economics, Georgetown University, Paul F. Douglas, president of American University, Prof. John Donaldson, professor of political economics, 1601 Arsonne pl., and the Rev. John W. Rustin, Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church, 1330 Holly st. nw.

Representing industry:

J. J. Hasley, vice president and general manager, the Palais Royal, and L. Gardner Moore, manager, the Shoreham.

Representing labor (AFL):

F. J. Coleman, Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, 414 Washington Loan & Trust Bldg.; John Lochor, Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, Local 5, 1211-A Connecticut ave. nw.; William Blake, Joint Executive Board; Robert Lester, Maryland-District of Columbia Federation of Labor, 720 5th st. nw., and Charles B. McCloskey, Bakery and Confectionary Workers, Local 148, 527 9th st. nw.

And with the CIO:

Mrs. Mary Kovner, American Newspaper Guild, 210 Kellogg bldg., 1416 F st. nw.; Martin Wagner, Coke and Chemical Workers, 220 Emerson st. nw., Ignacius Geraci, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 1449 N st. nw., Leonard Askin, American Newspaper Guild, 25 Kennedy st. nw., William Crawford, American Newspaper Guild, 4913 Lackawanna st., Berwyn, Md., Joseph H. Bernard, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 527 9th st. nw., Jack Kutner, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 1407 L st. nw.

Gen. Hall to Speak

Brig. Gen. William Hall, deputy chief of staff, Army Air Forces, and the youngest general in the U. S. Army, will speak about "Air Power" at the Rotary Club luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel today at 12:30 p. m. In 1941, General Hall was assistant executive officer at Bolling Field.

War Fund Gifts Total $556,826

Government Unit Collects $222,988 And Gives Figures For Departments

The Community War Fund drive total leaped to $556,826 last night with the Government Division reporting contributions of $222,988.

The Government Division figures were announced at a meeting in the Interdepartmental Auditorium attended by section chairmen and drive leaders presided over by Preston Delano. Breakdown of the Government total was presented by Frank Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury, as follows:

Administrator of U. S. Courts, $711; National Housing Administration, $1648; State Department, $1709; Treasury, $25,349; Justice, $2816; Postoffice, $4760; Navy, $81,020; Interior, $870; Agriculture, $34,055; Commerce, $19,003; Labor, $7682; Federal Security Administration and War Manpower Commission, $28,072; Federal Works Agency, $28,038; Reconstruction Finance Corp. and Export-Import Bank, $13,442; Federal Communications Commission, $17,018; Federal Reserve System, $6968; General Accounting Office, $18,064; National Advisory Commission for Aeronautics, $996; National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, $833; U. S. Civil Service Commission, $19,564; War Shipping Administration, $302; U. S. Tariff Commission, $23,073; Veterans' Administration, $8507; D. C. Government, $2308; Welfare and Recreation Association, $702; American Red Cross, $2561; War Production Board, $6022.

Taft Addresses Meeting

Charles P. Taft, director of U. S. rehabilitation work for the East Indies and Malaya, addressed the meeting outlining the aims of the war fund campaign.

Earlier in the day, the Advanced Gifts Division had reported contributions amounting to $217,552, representing 39.5 per cent of its $550,000 quota to bring the total for the drive at that time to $333,838. The figures were announced at a luncheon at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Before these figures were revealed, the total had reached $168,050, collected by the Advanced Gifts Division and the Business and Finance Division. Largest single donation was anonymous and in the amount of $5000. First complete reports on amounts pledged or subscribed in cash will not be known until October 21, when all divisions meet in the chamber auditorium at noon.

Business and finance chairmen, vice chairmen and executive assistants will meet Friday at 12:30 p. m. in the penthouse of the C. & P. Telephone Co. to develop maximum momentum in the division's part of the campaign.

Judd to Speak Next Week

Representative Walter Judd, Minnesota, will be principal speaker at a Mayflower Hotel meeting, October 19, at 7 p. m. of the Metropolitan Division, headed by E. K. Morris. The meeting, the first of Met's in the campaign, will be a rally of all workers, and will signalize the "Cover the City" theme of the division.

Reservations for the Metropolitan division's dinner that night at the Mayflower are being taken at the War Fund office, 1101 M st. nw.

Strong democratic appeal to the community to speedily subscribe the drive amount was made yesterday by Allan C. Griffith, leader of Negro Masons, who said:

"Let us help meet the problem with which welfare agencies are confronted by giving liberally to the 1944 Fund, regardless of race, color and creed."

Church Meetings

The drive will continue today with Area 1 of the Metropolitan division meeting at Epiphany Church, 1317 G st. nw., at 4:30 p. m.; Area 3 in District B at St. Francis Xavier Church, 28th st. and Penn. ave. se., at 8 p. m.

The Government division will meet at 10 a. m. in the Pentagon to hear reports from War Departments's Ordnance Section of the drive.

Tomorrow, Governmen division will stage four meetings, one in Harding Hall of the Government Printing Office, with Claude M. Baker of Cleveland, president of the International Typographical Union, and Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, as principal speakers.

Area 8 of Prince Georges County of Metropolitan division will meet Thursday at 3:30 p. m. in Laurel USO Building, to be followed by a meeting of Area 4 of Montgomery County at Hayden Farms, Silver Spring, Md., at 7 p. m.

Holiday in Maryland

Banks and courts throughout Maryland were closed yesterday—a legal holiday—in observance of the 451st anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. All State offices were closed.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Doesn't Smoke, Drink, Gamble or Flirt; He Disapproves of His Wife's Risque Stories; Bored by His Utter Devotion, She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for seven years; and in that time I have not been happy, because my husband is too good, and has only one interest in life,—ME. His parents were foreign missionaries and he was born in China; and seems to have been indoctrinated with too many saintly ideas. He does not drink, smoke or gamble; and he even disapproves of playing bridge for money. He thinks I am terrible for liking to tell slightly risque stories. He is a good provider and often spends money foolishly on me,—for gowns, jewelry and (in the past) silk hose.

He seems to have a passion for long strings of beads; perhaps that, too, is a hangover from his childhood. He showers me with expensive necklaces that I never wear. I abhor flowers, and he seems to take delight in surrounding me with them. He seems to have no interest in other women. I have repeatedly invited attractive young ladies to the house, but he regards them only as friends of mine and treats them accordingly. I rented a spare room to two very attractive warworkers and have given him every opportunity to take notice of them, but he is interested only in me. At times he reminds me of a foolish little poodle dog.

He seems to have an obsession,—or whatever you call it,—that if we had a child, I would be happy. But I do not care for children, and I do not want to lose my figure. Please advise me how to get him more interested in other women, so I will feel free to have men friends. I was married while still in school and feel that I have missed much. I feel that I cannot go on in this undeveloped, juvenile existence. Incidentally, I have tried several times to make him jealous; but to no avail. He has such a stupid, unchanging faith in me.

B. G. C.

Both Need Help, In Different Ways

DEAR B. G. C.: If your story be true, you are indeed going to rot, psychologically and spiritually, due to clinging tenaciously to an "undeveloped, juvenile" viewpoint on life,—best illustrated by your theory that life would be wonderful if you could just manage your marriage so as to have a stag line at your beck and call, with your husband absent mindedly bringing up the rear, meantime genially garnering his proportionate share of offside flirtatious divertissement, while waiting his turn for your attention. The worst of the situation, as I see it, is that both you and your husband fall equally short, in different ways, of being Grade-A adults;—so that you are virtually helpless to help each other grow into maturity of character. On the surface, by conventional standards, your husband's behavior may seem exemplary. He doesn't drink, smoke, gamble or flirt. But the fact that he slavishly worships and extravagantly pampers an infantile-minded wife, who impatiently regards him (and negligently treats him) as a "foolish little dog"; and who, far from appreciating his signal devotion, actually throws other women at his head, in the hope of diverting his interest from her,—this performance of his plainly bespeaks a man under the spell of a neurotic obsession.

It can hardly be supposed that you are the recipient of "deathless love" from him, since obviously you are not "the type" to inspire noble passion in a thoughtful man. So, when we see him fixing on you as a drowning man cleaves to a straw,—and the simile in this instance is very apt,—despite his being prudish and your being risque (in speech and philosophy), we know that he is a queer duck in his own right; and subjectively beset by severe emotional madadjustments, doubtless tracing back to his "too saintly" rearing in a pagan clime. It is not so much "a stupid, unchanging faith" in you that keeps him "fixated" in the whole-souled worshipper's role,—as it is his desperately felt need to wholly identify himself with, and completely endear himself to, and permanently settle down with, a "better half," whose personality he believes (or wants to believe) is as dauntlessly enterprising and self-assured as his is passive and uncertain. His unconscious purpose is to let that person invest his private life with the definite lasting form and substantial significance he feels personally unable to provide,—owing to his subconscious conflict and confusion.

Man Is Worshipping At Empty Altar

No doubt you have caught the spirit of his peculiar devotion rather well, in cruelly comparing him to a "foolish little dog." But in view of the great measure of his need to find sanctuary,—and stimulus and aid to intellectual and spiritual growth,—in close association with a truly mature character, it is unfortunate indeed that he should have attached himself to your dummy personality. You are of about as much help to him,—along the lines in which he needs help,—as a petulant child aged 10 would be. As for your summing-up sentence, namely: "Please tell me how to get him more interested in other women, so that I will feel free to have men friends,"— if that isn't a lame attempt to be funny, if it is seriously meant, then (as we say in the vernacular), lady, you ought to have your head examined. Get yourself to a psychiatrist right away; and have your husband invest that money he might squander on gew-gaws, in a course of Education-for-Living for both of you.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Take Active Part in Politics, Sen. Ball Tells Women Voters

By Genevieve Reynolds

"The very continuance and growth of democracy depends upon our setting up a collective and effective bargaining system with other countries in postwar collaboration," declared Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota. "Failure to establish effective postwar collaboration means dictatorship for this country."

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Speaker at the D. C. League of Women Voters' luncheon meeting yesterday, the Senator warned that these stakes for a permanent peace overshadow all other issues in the coming election. Yet, he said that he was afraid domestic issues would overwhelm the foreign issues in the November elections.

"Until the outcome of the war, domestic policies cannot be actually determined," explained Senator Ball, who again emphasized the necessity for collective security. He went on to point out that failure of collective security will affect the domestic policies, which would mean large armies, adopting an imperialistic policy to grab air bases al over the world. Total result—increasing regimentation and socialism.

"The postwar world isn't going to be the rosy picture that advertising agencies are depicting," asserted the Senator. "You can't expect soft years in the immediate future. There are the tremendous problems of reconverting industry to peacetime production; of getting 10 or 11 million men back into civilian jobs; of seeing that we have a clear-cut, intelligent foreign policy."

Well, what can the League of Women Voters do to help in shaping this postwar world?

To that question Senator Ball replied: "Get active in politics. See that the right candidates are nominated and, once nominated, supported. Make your weight felt in Congress. Pressure groups in Congress are all right, a healthy thing when the group has no particular economic ax to grind."

He advised them to get busy in caucus meetings, primaries, etc., for the platforms adopted by the Democratic and Republican Parties are, in the long run, preponderantly important in determining the foreign policy of the United States. Senator Ball estimated that each league member could influence at least 50 votes, saying that our foreign policy is determined by politicians.

Failure of the American people to vote and support the right candidates—men of vision and integrity—is the reason that men of integrity, ability and honesty steer clear of politics. They can't act according to their beliefs because of pressure groups and because the people will not support them at the election polls. He made it clear that politicians with a different approach and vision are needed to help solve the problems of the postwar world.

While speaking directly to the League of Women Voters yesterday, the Senator made it clear that other women should get busy in politics and give their support to high-type men.

Mrs. Eugene Duffield, league president, presided. Page McK. Etchison, religious secretary of the National YMCA, spoke on "War Prisoners' Aid." Preceding the luncheon the board held a reception. Those at the head table in addition to the speaker and president included: Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, director; Mrs. E. W. Spaulding, Mrs. Walter Laves and Mrs. Joseph H. Ball.

Drafting of mothers and fathers might be avoided if the 375,000 persons now employed in the liquor industry were released to go into war production or defense work. So declared Miss Elizabeth Smart, national director of legislation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, guest speaker at the D. C. WCTU's sixty-ninth annual convention at last night's opening session.

"The liquor industry itself estimated that it employed one million or more in peacetime," she said. "There are still 375,000 places selling liquor in the United States. Certainly these should be placed in war production before women are drafted."

Going on record against the drafting of mothers, she gave as among her reasons the increase of juvenile delinquency. She pointed out that a great effort now is being made to warn parents of the need for home and community cooperation.

"You can't expect to train mothers in beer parlors," asserted Miss Smart. "You can't contend with the forces where girls are placed in communities or working areas where the only form of entertainment is in places dispensing alcoholic beverages.

"We have to face realities," she continued. "Much of the grain shortage is due to the corn being taken for the manufacture of alcohol."

In her own section of the country, she said, people had started to raising poultry to relieve the food shortage. But the corn and other grains that could be obtained to feed the poultry had been depleted of all nutritive value—the best had gone to the brewers—so very few eggs could be obtained. It boiled down, she said, to the question of whether America will eat properly or just drink.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Mrs. Wickard and Dr. Stanley Give War Rationed Recipes

Martha Ellyn

If we are to better understand our neighbors, we will have to know how to live and work together in "one world." Now is the time to start to build a basis of understanding for the little things as well as the big ones. The breaking of bread is one social custom which has always brought people close together.

DR. STANLEY

When the boys come home they will tell about foods they have eaten on foreign shores. Many of the distinctive dishes will have been pleasing to them. Then too, because of our good neighbor policy, our workers will be going to other countries, while theirs will come to us. American women are now going into the South American countries where there is a need for dietitians to teach better nutrition. Perhaps, persons in many phases of work will answer the call of the good neighbor policy and go out to other countries to give the benefit of their specialized training.

A recent cook book, "United Nations Recipes," compiled by the D. C. Unit, American Women's Voluntary Services, gives recipes of many nations, adapted for war rationed cooking. Among recipes contributed by our own women are those of Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Dr. Louise Stanley, Special Assistant to the Research Administrator, Agricultural Research Administration. Today their recipes are given. In future columns, recipes by persons of other countries who have contributed to this excellent assembly of recipes will be given. The following are Mrs. Wickard's and Dr. Stanley's recipes:

Mrs. Wickard, who has a reputation for the delicious food she cooks and serves, tells how to use dried black-eyed peas and navy beans, using bacon and other fat drippings. Her recipe for using meat drippings for wilting lettuce are also given.

USES FOR FAT DRIPPINGS

Wash and pick over 2 cups of dried black-eye peas or navy beans. Soak overnight. Cook in the same water that was used for soaking and add whatever is necessary to cover well. Add either bacon, ham, beef drippings or left-over ham bone. Cook slowly for 2 hours.

MRS. WICKARD

WILTED SPINACH

Heat 4 tablespoons bacon or beef drippings in a heavy frying pan. Add one small chopped onion. Cook until onion turns yellow, then add ½ cup vinegar. When this mixture has come to boiling point, pour it over the spinach which has been washed carefully and picked over. This is also good on Boston lettuce.

Dr. Stanley's recipe for Whole Wheat Chowder is a nutritious dish that will hit the spot these cold days. Her recipe follows:

WHOLE WHEAT CHOWDER

Cook 2 cups diced carrots in 1 pint boiling water. Fry ½ cup diced salt pork until crisp. Remove it from the fat and fry 4 tablespoons chopped onion in same skillet. Stir in 1 tablespoon flour and cook a few minutes. Mix 2 cups cooked whole wheat, 1 pint milk, 1 teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley with the other ingredients. Stir until well blended and cook about ten minutes in the upper part of a double boiler.

Enriched Bread

This month brings good news to home bakers. Increased portions of thiamin, niacin and iron are being added to flour by millers. Riboflavin, which is essential to growth, will also be included for the first time.

Give Your Clothes Room

Don't overcrowd your clothes closet. Wrinkles will tend to disappear from wool and rayon garments if they have a complete rest for several days in a roomy closet.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When a country is not at war we are all inclined to be wasteful of our blessings. There is so much of everything that we measure with a lavish hand, sure that when anything is gone there will be more to take its place.

We cannot do this now. Every drop of medicine, every spoonful of food, every garment we own should be used economically so that everyone can have what they need, if not what they would like to have.

Vitamin A is one of the essentials for night-flying pilots and cod-liver oil is a combination of vitamins A and D. It was once customary to give both plain oil and concentrated oil with a generous hand, considering any excess to be just that much better protection from rickets. Now that we must conserve our supplies, only as much oil is given as is actually needed for protection or cure.

The dosages of plain oil used to be upward of three teaspoons a day. Now the maximum dosage for protection need be only two teaspoonfuls. The doses for concentrated oils of popular type used to be 5 to 15 drops, the protective dose now is 3 drops. Of course, all such vitamins are dosed by a doctor, but mothers should be prepared for these smaller amounts, especially as they have been accustomed to so much larger dosages.

A medicine dropper should be used to give these drop doses neatly. Then there is little danger of any of the precious drops being spit out by baby. The dose should be put on the back of baby's tongue, so swallowing is automatic.

If plain oil is given, put in only a portion of the oil in the teaspoon at one time. Put the spoon to baby's lips and let him lick it off much like a cat lapping up milk. To put large amounts of oil in the baby's mouth may cause him to choke or to draw the oil into the lungs, which is dangerous, as well as wasteful.

Take time to do this daily job carefully and neatly, saving every drop of this essential vitamin so it may do the most good to the greatest number of babies and soldiers.

Our leaflet, "Rickets and the Antirachitics," attempts to make this subject of interest to the mothers of small children. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

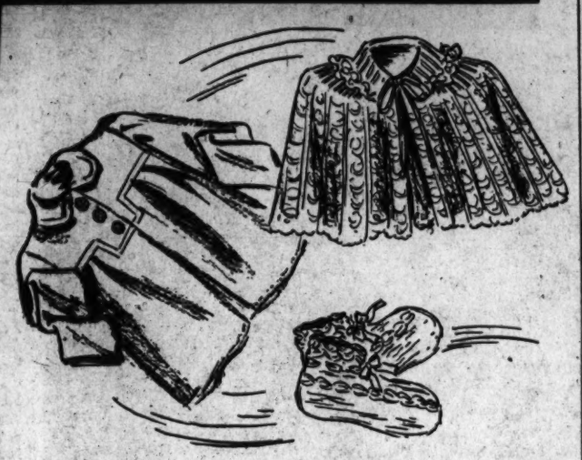
Bedtime Story

By Ruth Gregory

Maybe what Hamlet really needed was a warm nightie! Gets awfully cold in those Scandinavian countries, and if he wasn't properly tucked away at night, it's no wonder he saw ghosts and moaned about "raveled sleeves" and things.

It gets cold in Washington, too, and if you don't want insomnia for a bedfellow, you better plan on warm sleeping garments. Here's a trio of chill-chasers that ought to take care of assorted tastes. If it's a gown you favor, that gay striped flannelette (pink or blue stripes) will button up to your chin and it's long enough to wrap up your toes at the same time. (Around $3).

Next in line is a pair of snug balbriggan pajamas (white only) with red, white, and blue braided cord at neck and waist (about $3.) And that old-fashioned white flannelette nightie is a garment a lot of women are going to be happy to slip into come November. This one's available in sizes 46-50, it's sanforized, and it's under $2.



Booties and Bed Jackets

Cold feet? It happens in the best of families. And until these lower extremities thaw out, you can't sleep. You can save yourself a lot of trouble with a pair of all-wool booties like these sketched. They come in several pastel shades and are something over $1.

Bed-jackets used to be associated with the idle rich who breakfast in bed. Not anymore. Not with the fuel outlook still pretty grim. They're perfect for reading in bed, for throwing around your shoulders. . . .

That all-wool knit wrap, for instance, is called a "bridge cape," and it's pretty enough to wear in your parlor. Comes in soft pastels, and is about $3. The little johnny-collared jacket next to it is of brushed rayon (pink, white, or blue), and is around $2.50.

500 Nursing Schools

More than 500 schools of nursing are now approved to train student nurses in the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps, according to Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service. Almost 31 million dollars have been alloted to the schools.

Handle With Care

When you open the refrigerator door, remember that grease and oil from the human hands, as well as strong cleansing agents, are harmful to rubber. So hands off the gasket—that cushiony strip of rubber which outlines the inside of the door, making it airtight.

Now It's Shark Meat

A sharp rise in demand for shark meat on this coast has made it impossible for fishermen to fill existing orders, the Office of the Coordination of Fisheries announced recently. Shark is white meated, comparing with swordfish in texture and with haddock in flavor.

Time to Think

At a time when nearly every woman you meet complains she is so rushed she "simply has no time to think" there is a general call for people to think more about the problems of war and peace. With so many men busy fighting, the bulk of the volunteer thinkers, like the bulk of the new factory workers, must be furnished by women.

That the "war must be won in our thinking," the peace determined in our thinking," was emphasized in a recent forum of educators and writers. Dr. John T. Frederick of the University of Chicago brought the encouraging word that "people wanted to think about the problems of the day." He cited the phenomenal sales of Wendell Willkie's "One World," which are estimated to reach five million. The ideas of persons who read books like that would permeate through millions of non-readers, inciting them to think, he believed. The sale of Walter Lippmann's "United States Foreign Policy," and of the many recently published books on peace and postwar problems also were cited as evidences of Americans' willingness to think.

Develop Thinkers as Well as Fighters

In another recent plea for thinking, Charles F. Kettering, inventor, declared, "we can develop thinkers as well as anything else if we put as much energy into the development of good constructive ideas as into fighting." He further declared that "by practice we improve our thinking." Other leaders have repeatedly pointed out that old ideas are not enough to solve the social and political problem the world faces. New ones are needed. They will not be found unless people use the highest potentialities of their minds.

Yet despite all this, the average woman feels little responsibility to think. She does not include thinking among her patriotic services. Anyway isn't she doing enough—with all her housework, and bandage rolling and bond buying—without having to bother to think? Besides, why should she think about war and peace problems? Aren't President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill taking care of that? Didn't the Republican Party settle those things at Mackinac Island? Didn't the House pass the Fulbright resolution? Isn't the Senate going to do something pretty soon? Anyway can't she depend upon Senator Tweedledee, whose oratory she has always admired, to see that everything goes right? Besides thinking is such a dreary chore.

That unfortunately is the prevalent viewpoint of both women and men in a country where action is valued more than thought. As Pearl Buck recently pointed out in regard to this Nation's relation to China, we are willing to play Lady Bountiful and help other peoples materially, but not willing to be bothered with thinking about their problems so we may help them to help themselves. Worse still, we are not willing to be bothered with thinking about our own problems.

Need to Think Before We Speak

Visitors from India and China frequently express wonder at the little regard Americans have for meditation. They wonder how we manage to speak and act so readily without thought. These Oriental observers have been ready to admit their own people could profit by some of our energy and action, but they also feel that Americans need more of their meditative approach to problems.

Increasingly Westerners are realizing this. Churches are offering more facilities for meditation and prayer—without accompanying admonition and ceremony. Educational institutions are realizing that students need a place as well as a time to think. The English philosopher Gerald Heard, who accompanied Aldous Huxley to this country and founded a school in California, centers his institution's activities about a meditation hall.

The average woman of course has no meditation hall. She may not even have a place of her own in which to "set and think." But if she will bother to interest herself in the problems of war and peace, if she will read and listen along those lines at every opportunity, if she will squelch her inferiority feelings about being a "little woman who doesn't understand about such things" and have faith in her own inspiration and conviction, she will find that in her busiest moments she will have time to think, and to think effectively about the Nation's needs.

Australian Official Honor Guest at Party

Sir William and Lady Glasgow Feted By South African Minister and Mrs. Close

By Marie McNair

Washington had but a fleeting glimpse of one of Australia's distinguished statesmen—Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner to Canada, who arrived with Lady Glasgow on Monday and will leave today for New York.

During their brief stay in the Capital Sir William and Lady Glasgow were guests of the Australian Minister and Lady Dixon; met a representative few of official society at a dinner Monday evening given for them by their hosts; and a larger group yesterday at the cocktail party at the South African Legation with the Minister and Mrs. Close, the hosts. Sir William's ties with South Africa go back to the Boer War when as a dashing young soldier, he fought with Britain's Legions against the Boers. Again he joined up to carry the colors for his country—this time in World War I, and he now holds the rank of major general, retired.

Appointed High Commissioner to Canada in December, 1939, Sir William had before that held a number of prominent government offices. He was Minister for Defense from 1927 to 1929 and for exactly a round dozen years occupied a seat in the Australian Senate.

There was a pleasant air of informality at the party yesterday. In place of the usual buffet table, a bar had been set up at the far end of the drawing room and cocktails and canapes passed in constant procession. Chrysanthemums in orange and bronze tones gave bright bits of color to the scene and the drawing room door opening on the garden looked out on the greensward and tall trees tinted by autumn's hand.

Army and Navy uniforms seemed to dominate in the gathering. But the hostess' friends among Washington's "cave-dweller" set also turned out, notably the Misses Mary and Helen Patten, rarely found at parties these days. Justice Robert Jackson, another infrequent partygoer, was also there with Mrs. Jackson, and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, was finding many friends to greet her.

Newest member of the "Little Cabinet" set is Mrs. Edward Stettinius, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who is taking up her new duties with a will, and was as chic as she is pretty in a gray costume topped with a gray hat with accents of flame-colored ribbons.

From the congressional contingent I glimpsed Mrs. Charles McNacy and Mrs. Tom Connally, Miss Vera Bloom; from the State Department, Mrs Stanley Hornbeck, whose husband is now in England.

Canadian Legation Opens Tomorrow for United Nations Club

Prominent persons from diplomatic and military circles will attend the United Nations Club parties Thursday and Sunday evenings of this week.

The Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy will open the Canadian Legation to the club Thursday from 8:30 to 11 p. m. Acting as hostess will be Mrs. John Norton, wife of Canadian Wing Commander Norton. During the evening a group of moving picture films will be shown, followed by musical numbers by Mrs. Dorothy Norman, concert pianist and United Nations board member.

Mrs. Dwight ("Ike") Eisenhower will be hotsess for the club's Sunday night dance at the Texas Company's home, Massachusetts ave. and Q st., from 7 to 11 o'clock. Among the honored guests will be the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne. Entertainment for the dance is being planned by Miss Cathaline Parker, daughter of Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward. Miss Parker, who is coming down from New York for the dance, will bring with her two Hindu dancers to appear on the program. Musically talented, Mill Parker will sing during the evening.

The Canadian Legation party is the first of a series of embassy and legation events scheduled for the club. Ambassador and Mme. Andrei A. Gromyko have extended the use of the Soviet Embassy on the following Thursday, October 21, and the Egyptian Legation will be open to the group on October 28 through the courtesy of Minister and Mme. Hassan.

A correction is hereby made in the date of the first United Nations forum lectures previously announced. The opening lecture in the series of six will be given Monday, November 22, at 8:30 in Constitution Hall. The other lectures will follow fortnightly.

Captain Tayloe Home on Leave

Capt. H. Gwynne Tayloe, jr., U. S. Army, and Mrs. Tayloe, arrived in Middleburg, Va., early this week from Camp Forrest, Tenn., to spend his leave of 10 days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gwynne Tayloe, at their home, Windover.

Mr. and Mrs. Tayloe will entertain at a dinner party on Saturday night in honor of Captain Tayloe, who will celebrate his birthday on that date.

The Crains Plan Party to Precede Navy Day Dinner

Naval and diplomatic representatives of the United Nations and their wives are among those being invited to a reception to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Crain in the Chinese Room of Hotel Mayflower preceding the Navy Day dinner on October 27. Other guests will include high-ranking officials of the U. S. Navy and their wives.

The civilian guest list includes many persons prominent in Washington social and business life and closely identified with affairs of the District of Columbia Council of the Navy League of the United States. Mr. Crain is president of the Washington Council. Chairman for Navy Day is W. Royce Powell.

Eric Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will be principal speaker at the Navy Day dinner, and Representative James W. Wadsworth of New York will be toastmaster of the occasion.

Daughter of Former Ambassador Is Engaged to Marine Lieut. Daniel Baugh Brewster, Jr.

Bride-Elect Now Employed in Navy Department

Miss Anne Bullitt, daughter of William C. Bullitt, former American Ambassador to France and Soviet Russia, is engaged to be married.

Her fiance is Second Lieut. Daniel Baugh Brewster, jr., USMC, now stationed at Quantico, Va. Formal announcement of the engagement was made yesterday by Mr. Bullitt from Philadelphia where he is now a candidate for mayor of that city.

Was Hostess For Father

Miss Bullitt, just 19, was hostess for her father at the American Embassy in Paris when she was but 15 years of age. Her poise and intelligence won for her the title "Assistant American Ambasador," during her father's regime. When she was 9 years old she sailed with her father for Moscow. She was abroad with him until September, 1939, when her father compelled her to return because of the threat of war. She attended schools in Europe and was graduated from the Foxcroft School in Virginia in June, 1941.

The same month she was presented to society in Washington at a gay and lavish ball given by Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the former American Minister to Sweden, at the Sulgrave Club, and a week later made her debut to Philadelphia society at an equally gala fete given by her father at the Bullitt home, Meadow Farm, Penllyn, near Philadelphia.

Highly Popular As Debutante

One of the most popular debutantes of that or any season, Miss Bullitt remained unchanged and unspoiled by attention. She and her father are the best of pals, a fact borne out at her debut in Philadelphia when she asked Meyer Davis to write special lyrics to the tune of "My Sister And I." The parody called "My Daddy and I" was sung by the pretty debutante to her father as a surprise feature of the evening.

The bride-to-be is now employed in the Navy Department in Washington and has set no date for her wedding.

Lieutenant Brewster is the son of Mrs. William Francis Cochrane, jr., of Brooklandville, Md., and the late Daniel Baugh Brewster. He was graduated from St. Paul's School and left Princeton University to enlist as a private in the Marine Corps.

Count Tarnowski Making Home Here

Count Antoni Tarnowski, former Secretary of the Polish Embassy, has returned to town as consultant to the National Committee of Americans of Polish Descent, and will make his headquarters in Washington.

Once Counselor of the Polish Legation in Holland, Count Tarnowski was sent to the United States in September, 1939. When the Nazis took over Poland the embassy staff here was necessarily reduced and the popular bachelor diplomat went to New York early in 1940.

Colombian Envoy Named To New Post

When the Colombian Ambassador, Alberto Lleras, left Washington a fortnight ago, there were few who knew that he wouldn't be coming back. His appointment as Minister of the Interior has just been announced.

A close friend of President Alfonso Lopez, the Ambassador held the same post when he was but 29 years of age, making him probably the youngest cabinet member in the history of his country's government.

Senor Lleras left his family here when he returned to Bogota so that it won't be long before Senora de Lleras and their three children will be leaving for home. Their stay in the Capital has been short, for the Ambassador only presented his credentials in May.

The newly named cabinet officer is editor and publisher of the newspaper, El Liberal, and was a steady contributor to its political columns. His career in journalism which later took him into politics, began when he was 19 years old and as a member of the staff of La Nacion, Argentina's widely read newspaper, he served as correspondent in France and Spain for several years. He returned to Colombia to be named chief of staff of El Tiempo, leading newspaper in Bogota, and as "Allius," made a name for himself with his daily column "Hoy."

Senor Lleras was once Minister of Education in Colombia, has served as chairman of the Liberal Party, and was delgeate to the Buenos Aires conference in 1936.

Lucy Arrington, Charles W. Lewis Are Married

Trinity Episcopal Church in Manassas, Va., was the setting for the wedding of Miss Lucy Clewes Arrington, daughter of David Jackson Arrington of Manassas, and Charles Walton Lewis, which took place at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. The bridegroom is the son of Charles Francis Montgomery Lewis, also of Manassas.

The Rev. Thomas Green Faulkner, jr., officiated at the ceremony and nuptial music was played by Mrs. G. Keith Lyons, organist.

Miss Doris Gamble Is Bride Of Lieut. James E. F. Gammon

Evening Rites Take Place at Sherwood Church; Sister Is Maid of Honor

Miss Doris Nettie Gamble, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Gamble, and Lieut. James Eugene Fair Gammon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Gammon, were married last evening at 8 o'clock, the ceremony taking place in the Sherwood Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Richard Musser officiated, and Mr. Gamble gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride wore a gown of white bridal satin made with a fitted bodice, long fitted sleeves, full skirt and long circular train. Her long tulle veil fell from a coronet of heirloom lace outlined with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses with a white orchid center.

Mrs. James Ross Gamble was the matron of honor and Miss Betty Gamble the maid of honor. Both wore costumes of silver blue faille taffeta fashioned with fitted bodices, sweetheart necklines and full skirts. They wore wine colored ostrich tips in their hair and carried clusters of wine colored roses. The bridemaids, Miss Peggy Gamble and Mrs. Nathan Gammon, jr., wore similar gowns with blue ostrich tip headdresses and carried blue delphinium and yellow roses.

Serving as best man was Lieut. (j.g.) Nathan Gammon, jr., and the ushers included James Ross Gamble, James Hall and John Gaff.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. The bride attended Purdue University and is a graduate of George Washington University. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Lieutenant Gammon was graduated from George Washington and George Washington University Law School. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Salb—McGee

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Anne McGee, daughter of Mrs. Raymond Charles McGee, and Sergt. Thomas Joseph Salb, AUS, son of Mrs. Charles Frederick Salb, jr., took place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The ceremony with a nuptial mass was performed by the Rev. John T. Bailey, and a musical program was given by Mrs. Esther E. Rholader, vocalist, accompanied by Mrs. Arthur McNerney.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother. She wore traditional white satin, the gown fashioned with a waistcoat and bustle back and trimmed in Alencon lace. The skirt ended in a long train and her fingertip veil of illusion was draped from a matching Juliet cap. She carried a mother of pearl prayerbook covered with white orchids.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Frances McGee, sister of the bride, wore an aquatone faille gown made with a sweetheart neckline, bustle back and short train. She wore a coronet of autumn flowers in her hair and carried matching flowers arranged in an old fashioned bouquet. Miss Marion Salb, cousin of the bridegroom, and his sister, Miss Julia Salb, who were bridesmaids, wore gowns like that of the maid of honor in rose and silver-gray color. They wore similar flower coronets and carried similar bouquets.

Charles Frederick Salb 3d was his brother's best man and the ushers, all cousins of the bridegroom, included George Salb, jr., Thomas R. Salb and Walter Salb, jr. A reception at the home of the bride's mother was held after the ceremony, for members of the two families and a few close friends. Later in the day Sergeant and Mrs. Salb left for a brief wedding trip to New Orleans. They will go to Hattiesburg, Miss., to make their home.

About the Man Who Has Guarded Five Presidents And a Press Club Luncheon in His Honor

BY HIS OWN admission, a two-fisted, two-gun man, who stands 6-foot-2, and has guarded five Presidents, was trembling in his boots around noontime yesterday. A past-master at coping with crackpots and keeping a trigger eye on President-haters, Col. Edmund (Big Bill) Starling confessed that the ordeal to which he was subjecting himself was one of the most nerve-wracking in his entire career.

"Having listened to speeches for 30 years, I have no intention of making one now," said the popular Kentucky colonel who retires November 1 as head of the White House Secret Service. Then, with a twinkle, he surveyed his audience over the rims of his spectacles and gallantly tossed out a few verbal bouquets. He dropped a strong hint that of all groups he had seen circulating around the Executive Mansion, the women of the press were "the most to be admired" . . . and he finished off his brief remarks by thanking all of them, because, as he put it, "You have long dealt gently with my shortcomings, and encouraged my vanity."

From then on, the meeting was a question-and-answer affair, the guest of honor plainly showing that he was becoming more at home by the minute. Southern charm personified, he bowed to each reporter as she took the floor to ask him a question . . . and then, he either answered in detail or—if the subject was one he didn't care to discuss—cleverly sidetracked it by talking about something else. Obviously, he believes in living up to the letter as well as the spirit of "Secret Service."

HE DID REVEAL, however, that he kept a diary up until 1938, and that there was some chance it might be published later. "Just human interest stuff," he said. "And if people don't want to read it . . . I can just go on living on my pension."

His more than a quarter-century in Secret Service has been exactly the kind of a life he wanted. That was the impression clearly conveyed to everyone who heard him. The man who, as a railroad detective, captured train robbers in his younger days, was well prepared to keep cranks from taking potshots at Presidents. In all his career as a Secret Serviceman there was not a single attempt at a presidential assassination.

Probably his most thrilling experiences, he said, centered around the two trips he made to Paris with President Wilson. He taught President Coolidge how to fish, and how to use a shotgun . . . and on at least one occasion offered the "cool and silent Cal" a piece of advice that may have been responsible for his taciturn tactics later. Seems early in his career President Coolidge was mightily disturbed about some press report that he considered grossly unfair, and was of a mind to launch official protest. He discussed the matter with Colonel Starling, and the latter quoted the Persian proverb, "You are master of your unspoken word, but the slave of your spoken word." Relating the incident yesterday, Colonel Starling added wryly, "I don't think Coolidge really needed that advice."

He recalled that one of Coolidge's favorite stories had to do with a certain Uncle Silas, country store owner and general community manager, who was dead-set against liquor in any form and anybody who drank it. Most of the habitual imbibers who hung around the country store kept quiet about their liquor leanings because Uncle Silas held mortgages on their farms. They listened attentively as he called down the wrath of The Mighty on anybody who touched tongue to bottle.

So accustomed were they to that line of haranguing that when Uncle Silas ceased to talk about liquor, they wondered what had happened. Finally, the one man in the community who didn't owe him money, put the question to him boldly. "We've been wondering why you haven't been talking against liquor-drinking lately, Uncle Silas. Would you mind to tell us?"

"Well," answered the wily Uncle Silas, "you gotta be careful how you talk about liquor these days. It's gettin' kinda hard to get!"

COLONEL AND MRS STARLING, who have lived at the Mayflower for a number of years, will be off to Florida within a few weeks to make their home at a bayside home which they purchased some time ago. In that stalwart figure who kept a keen eye on countless crowds who viewed the President, every newspaperwoman knew she had a friend. We shall miss seeing him about . . . but wherever he goes, he will know he always has a lasting place in our affections. And pretty Mrs. Starling doesn't mind one bit. As she said at the luncheon yesterday, "No, I'm not jealous of my husband and the way you women love him. You see, he was around here with all of you quite a long time before I got him . . . so after I got him, I have felt reasonably safe."

'Make Yourself at Home' Theme Of Gay Luncheon in Servantless Home

Mrs. Francis Brown Honors Mrs. Grady At Mexican Party

Wood fires burned on four hearths—the fireplaces would smoke just a little—Mrs. Tomas Cajigas was in the kitchen stuffing victory garden tomatoes; Senora de Munilla was on her way to River Road with arroz con pollo (rice with chicken); Mrs. Walter Wyatt was helping arrange the floral pieces. It wasn't a benefit just Mrs. Frances Cabell Brown's guests working their way through luncheon and loving it. Mrs. Henry Grady was the honoree and was accompanied by her guest, Mrs. Kingman.

Not a ration point was used—even the dessert featured cheese given the Browns last Christmas. The chickens were from the Browns' back yard. And the vegetables told the success story of the victory garden, in which Mrs. Brown spent the summer.

Mrs. Barnet Nover helped keep the food warm and Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, wife of the Representative from California, carried the food from the kitchen to the buffet tables. Mrs. Charles Brand and Mrs. Bruce Smith helped the guests deposit hats and coats. Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck presided over the mixing and serving of cocktails. Mrs. Justin Miller poured the coffee and Mrs. Barton Embry stopped by a Mexican food shop for tortillas and enpanadas which were to fill hors d'oeuvres platters. And Mrs. George Barnes, who lives in Mrs. Brown's guest house, was a big help, too, with so much to be done in the Browns' servantless household.

Other guests for the Mexican luncheon were Senora de Michels, Mme. Wei Tao-Ming, Mme. Pramoj, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Lady Bajpai, Lady Bowes-Lyon, Judge Anna Belle Matthews, Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Mrs. O. W. McNeese, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. James E. Purely Personal

The Ambasbsador of Panama and Senor de Jimenez are in New York for a few days, where they are staying at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The Minister of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Molekamp have as house guest this week Mrs. Margaret Lacy, who arrived last night from New York. During her stay in the Capital, Mrs. Lacy will be entertained at a number of informal parties including one at which the Minister and Mme. Molekamp will be hosts.

Mrs. Arthur A. Vandenberg has gone to New York, where she is stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, who is spending a week in New York, will return to her home here on Thursday. With her in New York is Miss Adelaide Whitehouse.

Mrs. Richard Sears, jr., of Boston, who is spending several days in Washington as guest of Miss Eileen Karri-Davis, will leave this weekend for Florida, where she will visit her husband, Ensign Sears, who is an instructor at a naval base there.

Lieut. Kenneth N. Watson, USNR, and Mrs. Watson have gone to New York and are at the Asbassador for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Foote Purdy are at the Copley Plaze Hotel during their stay in Boston.

Comdr. Downey Guest Speaker

Commander Kenneth Downey RN, assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, will address members of the woman's committee of the National Symphony today at the luncheon in the Hotel Statler at 12:30 p. m. that launches the third annual drive for season ticket subscribers to the orchestra's Wednesday evening concerts.

Seated at the head table with Commander Downey and Mrs. Belin, who will preside, will be Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, and Mrs. Gordon MacCready, wife of Lieut. Gen. MacCready, head of the British Army Staff. In all, some 250 women are expected to be present, including Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Ralph Bard, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the National Symphony's women's committee.

Mrs. Emory Scott Land is in charge of the luncheon arrangements. Tickets may be obtained at the door.

Mrs. Vogel Fetes Couple on Tenth Anniversary

Entertaining at a surprise party in honor of Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, who make their home with her, Mrs. Martin Vogel gathered in a number of distinguished guests for a buffet dinner on Monday evening.

Her Woodland drive home, where so many gala fetes for servicemen have taken place the past year, was the scene of the event which marked the tenth wedding anniversary of the honor guests. Climax of the surprise fete was the presentation to them of a portable bar which had been purchased by a dozen close friends. Guests included many members from the Diplomatic Corps, a number from officialdom and numerous others from the service and residential sets.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Season Americana' Will Be Innovation at Catholic U.

IN THOROUGH CONSONANCE with the spirit of the times, the Catholic University Theater, which is by way of being the "trade name" of Father Gilbert V. Hartke's Speech and Drama Department, will present a five-production series of all-American plays for its season of 1943-44.

FRED STONE

The purpose of this innovation is to give Washington theatergoers a view of America's historical and dramatic heritage. Each production will reflect in its acting technique, settings and manner of staging the atmosphere of the period it represents. Each play will run 10 days in the University Theater on the campus.

The plays, selected after painstaking examination of available works typical of an era in America's cultural development, are "The Contrast," the first American comedy written by a native playwright, Royall Tyler; "Rip Van Winkle," which served more than one generation of the illustrious Joseph Jefferson's family; "Secret Service," William Gillette's famous Civil War thriller; David Belasco's "The Girl of the Golden West" and, as a capstone to the series, "Sing Out, Sweet Land," an original musical comedy by Walter Kerr, telling America's story in song and dance, from the first American music and dance steps down to the present day. And that isn't all.

Negotiations already are under way for the appearance of noted guest stars from both Broadway and Hollywood in some, if not all, of the productions. While this phase of the undertaking, so far, is only tentative as to stars actually to appear, it is betraying no secret, I think, to disclose that among those being sought are such as Pat O'Brien, Fred Stone (ideal for the Rip Van Winkle part), James Gleason and others of like standing. There will, of course, be more in greater detail concerning this timely project, but for the moment it will be sufficient to add only that season subscriptions now are being accepted at the University Theater box office.

Joint sponsors with Catholic University of this series are: Hon. Frank Murphy, Hon. Henry Morgenthau, Hon. Frank Walker, Hon. Charles McNary, Hon. John McCormack, Admiral Ernest J. King, Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee and Lieut. Comdr. Dorothy C. Stratton. The title of the series is "Season Americana."

Eventually we hope to learn—but doubt that we ever will—not to chide the Theater Guild for not opening all of its new plays in the Capital until we are fully apprised of its reasons and all the circumstances. Take the case of "The Innocent Voyage," with that admirable actor, Oscar Homolka, in the principal male role, for example.

Not so long ago we lifted a rebellious voice because the new piece was opening in Wilmington, playing two weeks in Philadelphia and then coming as close as Baltimore, but still omitting the Capital from its itinerary. Now I have been stumped by the question, "What else could we do?"

In "The Innocent Voyage" there are, it seems, three essential juvenile players, the oldest of whom is only 12. Under the lamentable restrictions of the District's ill-judged child labor law, this play, like so many others—"Life With Father," "Watch on the Rhine," etc., etc.—is automatically banned from Washington. Unless the management wants to go to jail, that is. It's a rank injustice to the best "show town" in the country, outside of New York, but there it is! Apologetic obeisance and deep genuflections to all and sundry.

Words Befitting the Occasion

The story goes that Ivor Stravinsky, famed Russian composer, visiting the "Rhapsody in Blue" set, at Warner Brothers, recalled his first meeting with George Gershwin in Paris. In the picture, Gershwin—whose life story it is—will be shown asking the privilege of studying under Stravinsky. The script has the Muscovite composer asking the American how much money he made during the past year and, upon hearing the answer, saying, "I should be taking lessons from you." Stravinsky told Producer Jesse L. Lasky and Robert Alda, who portrays Gershwin, he doesn't remember whether or not he actually said that. "But if I didn't," he declared, "I should have!"

That last jingle of the phone was to pass along word that the Jewish Community Center will be the scene of the presentation of a new edition of "This Is the WACS," come November 14. The business was one of the most successful of last season's productions at the JCC, under the same title. The new musical—a parodied tracing of the pattern of Berlin's "This Is the Army"—will be enlarged and improved and all new, except in that single matter of name. Certain of the skits and specialties already are in rehearsal.

"So Proudly We Hail." Mark Sandrich's picturization for Paramount of the heroism and romantic compromises of three nurses on Bataan, has been awarded the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for September, as the best picture of the month for consumption by the entire family. This, and it is only offered as a reminder, is a monthly choice made by representative organizations and individuals spanning the continent. It is a cross-section of national opinion that is apt to be right. This time their toast is "to the ladies"—Claudette Colbert, Paulette Goddard and Veronica Lake.

'Oklahoma' Tops New Playbills

Capitol

"I DOOD IT." Red Skelton and Eleanor Powell in a musical with Jimmy Dorsey's Orchestra and singer Bob Eberly. Hazel Scott, Lena Horne, Richard Ainley, Patricia Dane and Thurston Hall are also involved. On the stage "deadpan" singer Virginia O'Brien, comedian Jan Murray, Florence Hin Lowe, Chinese novelty dancer; the Ben Yost Quartet and the Great Gretonas, high-wire act. Opens Thursday.

Metropolitan

Earle

Columbia

"BOMBERS MOON." Action film about an escape from a Nazi prison. George Montgomery plays an American flier; Annabella, the Russian woman doctor, who escapes with him. Supporting roles are played by Kent Taylor, Walter Kingsford, Martin Kosleck, Dennis Hoey and others. Opens Thursday.

Pix

"TWO TICKETS TO LONDON" AND "LARCENY WITH MUSIC." The top half of the bill stars Michele Morgan and Alan Curtis; the lower half, Alan Jones, Leo Carrillo and Kitty Carlisle. Follows current feature, "Reap the Wild Wind."

Little

"THE LADY VANISHES" AND "THE GIRL WAS YOUNG." Two Alfred Hitchcock mystery thrillers, with Paul Lukas, Dame May Whitty, Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave starring in the former. The latter has Nova Pilbeal and Derrick de Marney in leading roles. Held over.

Trans-Lux

"AIRWAYS TO PEACE," the latest March of Time release, heads the shorts section. It is the story of the Air Transport Command. "Romantic Nevada," a travelogue, offers an insight into Reno doings. "Trifles That Win Wars," "The Rocky Road to Ruin," cartoon, and 25 minutes of war and other spot news pictorials, complete the bill. Opens Friday.

The Interview, Patently, Was Urgent!

Lucky Break, Being Only Girl in a Film

After six years, "100 Men and a Girl" is still considered one of the best movie titles of all time, and it would be a handy handle for any number of current pictures.

Nearly every branch of the armed services has been extolled on the screen. The casts of service pictures have been predominantly male, although the fair sex is now coming in for its share of attention in such films as "Cry Havoc," story of Army nurses on Corregidor, and "Ladies Must Fly," Walter Wanger's picturization of the WASPS.

"100 Men and a Girl," or even such a title as "1000 Men and a Girl," would fit more than a score of the service films, in which there has been just one girl among hundreds and thousands of men. Competition for these lone feminine roles in current pictures has been exceptionally keen among actresses.

For example, Barbara Britton was the sole feminine in one of the first epic war films, "Wake Island." Her role was brief, but attracted much notice.

Ella Raines' first motion picture appearance is doubly beneficial to the Universty of Washington girl. Not only does she costar with Randolph Scott and James Brown in "Corvette K-225," but she is the only feminine player in the Howard Hawks story.

Joan Leslie is the only girl who figures in the plot of "This Is the Army," in which she is surrounded by a good portion of the United States Service in khaki.

Similarly, Donna Reed is the only girl in "See Here, Private Hargrove," and Evelyn Keyes, has to share feminine honors with no one in another Army film, "Something About a Soldier."

Marguerite Chapman was the lucky lass who captured the one feminine part in "Destroyer," the Edward G. Robinson starring vehicle. Blonde Grace McDonald has just received the "break" of her career by landing the only feminine role in "Gung Ho!" Producer Walter Wanger's Universal story of the United States Marines' deadly raid on the Japs at Makin Island.

Spookiest assignment of all falls to Edith Barritt. She's the only woman who will appear in "Ghost Ship."

RKO-Keith's

"HIT THE ICE." Abbott and Costello's slapstick makes the utmost use of a winter resort background, with Ginny Simms and Johnny Long's Orchestra providing musical divertissement. Patric Knowles, Elyse Knox and Marc Lawrence are also conspicuous. Held over.

Gayety

Erroll Disappointed

Irish Prof. Theodore T. Flynn, father of Errol Flynn, canceled a scheduled United States lecture tour, with a Hollywood stopover, because of pressure of civilian defense duties.

HEDDA HOPPER

Miss Cornell Seeks Hollywoodite

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 12.—Katharine Cornell is trying to lure Bob Paris, Columbia's dramatic coach, for her new play. He can't break his deal with the studio. . . . Sidney Franklin has offered Ruth Nagel, Conrad's daughter, a junior writer's job at Metro, but she'd like to get some experience first as a cub reporter in New York. . . . Since Ann Dvorak established herself as a writer in London, she has more acting offers here than she can handle. She's doing a Hollywood column for a London paper. . . . Writing bug has hit Lucille Ball. She whipped up a thing called "That Was Yesterday," telling about her early days as a model, and her life as queen of the B's at RKO.

KATHARINE CORNELL

Kaye Keyen't Miss!

Sam Goldwyn's en route to New York, where he opens his "North Star" November 4 in two theaters, Victoria and Palace. Before leaving Sam showed me three of Danny Kaye's numbers in technicolor in "Up in Arms." If the rest of the film measures up, Danny Kaye will be the sensation of the year. He's got comedy, timing, a singing voice, perfection of Fred Astaire in putting over a number, satire, and sex appeal. And in a few weeks he'll be in uniform and on his way under government orders to entertain our troops at the front—and I mean the front. He'll be gone indefinitely. . . . Remember how bored you get wading thru the credit names which precede a picture? Danny's done a satire on that, then continues to satirize the whole picture in the lobby of a theater, keeping customers outside. He thought up that bit (which has been built into a perfect number) while clowning with Lily Pons at the Stage Door Canteen.

Nicely Carded

After sneak preview of "Government Girl," a preview card came in addressed to Olivia De Havilland and read: "Your sister, Joan Fontaine, had better sit up and take notice after this one." . . . Mrs. Nick Schenck is mighty excited. Her brother, Freddie Wilcox's first picture, "Lassie Come Home," goes into the Music Hall. He's back there celebrating. Freddie's been on the Metro lot 15 years, worked up through every department. . . . A Peruvian millionaire is backing "Bridge of San Luis Rey." . . . Not surprised Metro signed Joy Paige, Ann Warner's daughter, for "Kismet." She's perfectly beautiful. Was the center of all eyes while dining with her father, Don Alvarado, at the Players. . . . Remember when "It Can't Happen Here" was too hot to handle, was bought for a picture, then shelved? It would seem antediluvian now. . . . "Merrily We Roll," by Charles Belden, not the George Kaufman play, will be done at Twentieth Century with Joan Bennett.

John Hambleton, designer of costumes and sets for George Kaufman plays, is now working with Billy Menzies and Sam Wood, doing dresses for H. T. Stevens in "Address Unknown."

Palace

"FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS." Fifth and final week for the Technicolor film version of Ernest Hemingway's distinguished novel. Ingrid Bergman, Katina Paxinou, Gary Cooper and Akim Tamiroff have principal roles. Held over.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Oct. 12.

Commander Tony Kimmins is the famed British officer who has seen more action than any other man in this war. Since '39 he has served in every war theater. Kimmins arrived here from Salerno and went directly to Battery Park for a boat ride to the Statue of Liberty . . . Last year, in mufti, he traveled to Stockholm, where he baffled the Gestapo agents in the lobby by asking the desk clerk each morning: "Any secret messages for Room 306?" . . . Once, when the hotel was overcrowded, he was asked to share a room. The other tenant arrived and introduced himself—a heiling, heel-clicking Luftwaffe officer . . . who quickly repacked and fled when he saw Kimmins calmly reading a book: "Why Every Nazi Must Be Sterilized."

In Paramount's version of Somerset Maugham's "The Hour Before the Dawn," the author will be shown in a preface to the film. Maugham was photographed sitting behind a desk. Richard Meland, Paramount's story editor, told the prop man to pile a large assortment of papers and reference books on the desk. "We want this shot to be authentic," he explained to the author, "and the desk to look exactly as it does when you write" . . . Maugham pushed the litter off the desk—all but a pencil and plain rule paper. "This," he said, "is how I write."

Robert Casey, the veteran correspondent whose newest book will be called "Such Interesting People," arrived in England in 1939, carrying a lot of Newfoundland currency. During a short stop-over in Newfoundlnd he had bought a few cokes for some local children and proffered a $10 bill in payment. He was given change in Newfoundland halves, quarters, etc., despite his protests that the currency was useless to him. Casey wrapped it in a large handkerchief and vowed: "I'll get a chance to spend it somehow, some day" . . . A short time ago Casey returned to England. And when his plane stopped at Newfoundland, four years after his first visit, he had his currency ready.

Professor Michoels, the Russian actor, told a group of Broadway hopefuls about the search for perfection in the theater. "When Stanislavsky was in America, after he already had become famous as the founder of the Moscow Art Theater," Michoels revealed, "someone told him his speaking voice could be improved by taking singing lessons. And although Stanislavsky was over 63, he took those lessons—and when the neighbors complained about the noise, he wouldn't halt his lessons. Instead, he locked himself in a closet and did his singing there."

Sam Rosoff, the builder, once became engaged to an 18-year-old daughter of a friend and gave her an engagement ring. Her father persuaded her to call off the match. "Rosoff takes too many chances," he assured her, "and will wind up without money. He gambles heavily, in bidding for contracts, in cards, in horse races. He must wind up without money. He must lose" . . . The girl returned the diamond ring to Rosoff—who immediately resold it at $1000 profit.

More than half of the men playing rugged Bataan soldiers with George Reeves in Paramount's "So Proudly We Hail" worked with him only a few months earlier as cowboys in Westerns.

Plan Weighed For Retaining Quezon in Post

Efforts soon may be made to keep Manuel Quezon in office as President of the Philippine Commonwealth government-in-exile after his term expires on November 15, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

Col. Carlos Romulo, secretary of information for the commonwealth, said it was "uncertain" whether Quezon will leave office, adding the question would be put to American authorities to decide on the basis of present law. Other sources said the case would be taken directly to the Attorney General for a ruling.

"Whatever happens, the Philippine constitution must not be nullified," Romulo said.

The constitution provides that no President shall hold office for more than eight years. After having been President for six years, Quezon was reelected in 1941 on the basis that he would stay in office only until November 15, 1943. On that date, he must yield his office to Vice President Sergio Osmena, who also is in this country.

The Philippine official set here is divided between Quezon and Osmena adherents. Quezon's aides said yesterday he was unable to talk to reporters because he was ill.

After conferring with Quezon, Col. Romulo issued the following statement:

"The President is not interested in remaining in office. If under the law he should remain in office, I am certain he will not shirk the responsibility despite the present condition of his health.

"There is nothing in the Tydings' independence resolution or in President Roosevelt's message to keep President Quezon in office. I also know that President Quezon would not want the constitution of the Philippines nullified by an act of Congress. Whatever the law is now, bearing in mind that constitutional government in the Philippines has been nullified by Japanese invasion, that is what President Quezon would like. The determination of what that law is rests with other authorities."

2 Fliers From D. C. Area Killed Over Europe, Third Wounded

Two Washington area men have been killed in action over Europe and a third has been wounded in Sicily, according to a War Department announcement. Listed as killed are Staff Sergt. Adolph J. Lurig, 825 Marietta pl. nw., and Technical Sergt. Arthur E. Brittain, 6604 44th ave., Hyattsville, Md. Both were reported missing August 17. Staff Sergt Edgar L. Grubbs, 5607 O st., Hillside, Md., was wounded, but according to news received by his father has since returned to active duty.

LURIG

Staff Sergeant Lurig, 28, a tail gunner, was killed August 12 while on a bombing mission over German territory in the Fortress Calamity Jane, his mother, Mrs. Annie Lurig, said yesterday. The Air Medal was awarded to him early this year for having completed five successful combat missions and he had also received two oak leaf clusters, Mrs. Lurig stated. In addition, Sergeant Lurig had been commended by his superior officer for shooting down a German fighter when he kept to his station despite cannon shells which blasted big holes through the tail section of the Fortress.

A native of Washington, Lurig was an iron worker on the Pentagon Building prior to his induction, September 1, 1942. He was educated at Brightwood Elementary School and McKinley High School. Following his induction at Camp Lee, Va., he trained in Florida, New Jersey, Utah, and California.

Technician Sergeant Brittain, who was reported missing in a flight over Gelsenkirchen, Germany, hitchhiked 2500 miles last May to rejoin his outfit after being quarantined in Newfoundland with the mumps. Upon his release from the hospital he received permission to return to his detachment which had left for England. Accompanied by another sergeant, he accomplished the trip. The 19-year-old radio operator attended Hyattsville and St. John's High Schools before enlisting in the Air Corps in July, 1942.

Staff Sergeant Grubbs, 22, turret gunner and radio operator on a Mitchell 26, had completed 14 bombing missions before being wounded in the battle for Sicily, he has notified his father, Earl Grubbs. Born in Washington, he attended Hine Junior High School and was employed as a plumber before entering the Air Corps in August, 1942. He was trained in Florida and has been overseas six months. Three brothers are in the service; Staff Sergt. Charles Grubbs, stationed at Bolling Field; Staff Sergt. Roy Grubbs, with the armored forces in Texas, and Pvt. Earl Grubbs, now in the Pacific.

Longstreet's Widow to Be War Riveter

By the Associated Press

Marietta, Ga., Oct. 12. — The grey-haired widow of a famed Confederate general is the South's latest addition to the civilian war labor force.

Refusing to tell her age—except to chuckle "I haven't reached the century mark yet"—Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, whose husband, General James Longstreet, was one of Robert E. Lee's chief followers, dons slacks and cap each morning, leaves her home in a Marietta trailer camp and resorts for instruction at a riveting school.

"I am majoring in assembly, fabrication and riveting," she explained. "The course usually requires three months but I believe I will be ready for graduation in two weeks. I'm the head of my class . . . In fact, I'm the only one in it."

Since the death of General Longstreet in 1904, Mrs. Longstreet has been active in many affairs, serving as a newspaper reporter, freelance writer on political subjects, postmistress at Gainesville and, during World War I, an employe of the Veterans Bureau in Washington.

She was a schoolgirl—classmate of General Longstreet's daughter at Brenau College—when she met the famous Confederate leader. They were married at the executive mansion in Atlanta in 1897.

"I couldn't stay out of this war," she said. "The thought of American boys dying on the battlefields made me realize that I had to get in and do my part toward achieving victory."

Capital Transit Bond Purchases To Pay for Bomber

Capital Transit Co. employes and management have purchased $300,000 in war bonds, and as a result a heavy bomber will be named "Capital Transit Employes."

Plans for a public dedicatory ceremony to be held November 19, anniversary of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, were discussed at a meeting yesterday.

Among those at the session were James L. Houteling, director of national organizations, War Finance Division of the Treasury; Edward D. Merrill, president of Capital Transit Co.; 7-year-old Ruth Smith, who saved 1875 pennies to buy a bond, daughter of an employe; Robert Dougan, executive assistant to Merrill; Harry Crampton, treasurer; J. G. Bigelow, president of the company union; Samuel Emmons, transportation manager of the company, and George E. Odom and Raymond J. Smith, company operators.

Hens as Saboteurs

Veterans of Other Wars Guard TWA Planes And Yarn About Days When They Saw Action

By Emily Towe
Post Staff Writer

Thirty World War I veterans, with beribboned chests revealing service in all parts of the world, are guarding Transcontinental & Western planes flown for the Army to distant theaters of war.

A loquacious group with startling stories of feats in all branches of the armed forces, the veterans gather around a table every morning at "Joe's" restaurant across from their hangar at National Airport.

Yesterday, they were discussing the last war with an alacrity that seemed amazing for 7:45 o'clock in the morning. As each guard told his story, making it more impressive than the last, another was waiting to top them all.

For example: A Marine sergeant, veteran of four main drives in France, boasted that he had shot down an enemy plane with his rifle. Then a veteran told how he had helped drive Pancho Villa, Mexican bandit, into the hills in 1914.

Gas War by Germans

Another World War I veteran bragged a bit when he said "we fought a real war with those Huns throwing gas around. You should have seen our gas masks. They were really terrific—looked like elephant trunks hanging in front of our noses.

Sergt. Joseph A. Grendell of Boulevard Heights, Md., a jovial man who described himself as a "pill roller" with the Medical Corps assigned to the Rainbow Division of the AEF, returned from North Africa only two months ago, where he was sent as a mess sergeant. The sergeant, who will be 60 October 21, was disgruntled when the Army sent him home two days after his arrival "because I was too old."

"It all started in 1901 when I joined the Navy and cooked my way around the world," Sergt. Grendell recalled. "By 1914 I had worked my way up to a commissary steward but when time came for re-enlistment that year, I decided to have a little change So I joined the Army." He continued signing up with the Army until his retirement last summer.

Shot Plane With Rifle

Sergt. Anthony Rigler, 52, a native of Spotswood, N. J., who has seen the world with the Marine Corps, flourished ribbons of three campaigns—Mexican, Haitian and World War I. He was the one who brought down a German plane with two rifle shots as it was strafing the Marines in France.

Another genial guard who has an Army record of more than 30 years is Charles Workman, 2011 North Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va. He enlisted in 1910 and remained until his retirement in August, 1942.

His military career began with services in Honolulu and skirmishes on the Mexican border. During the World War, Sergt. Workman was sent overseas as a mess sergeant with the Field Artillery. He and Grendell boast that they can still cook tasty meals but they agree it's much wiser not to suggest menus and methods to their wives.

Also gathered around the table were Pvt. L. H. Williams, 1376 Bryant st. ne., who was injured in this country during the first World War, but has heard so many stories from his buddies that he contributed on practically every subject discussed; Sergt. Herbert B. Petrey, 51, who did not return to this country until 1921 because of his service with the Army of Occupation, and Boatswain's Mate L. F. Behrens of Washington, who was on convoy and destroyer duty with the Navy from 1917 to 1921.

C. J. Maddox Rites To Be Conducted At Rockville

Funeral services for Charles J. Maddox, 81, retired county surveyor for Montgomery County, Md., will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. The Rev. J. G. Hann, pastor of the church, will officiate and burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mr. Maddox, who died in his home near Rockville early yesterday after a heart attack, was county surveyor for 40 years. He was a son of the late Dr. Charles J. Maddox and was a lifelong resident of Rockville and vicinity. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Mary K. Maddox, Rockville, five sons, Robert K., James P., and John H. Maddox, all of Rockville; Charles J. Maddox jr., Redland, Md., and Sterling R. Maddox, Bethesda; a sister, Miss Annie Maddox of Rockville, and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Maddox was succeded by his son, Robert, as county surveyor last fall. He belonged to the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Church.
